The Eternal Sky.

Written for the Living Church.

Leaning from my window in the night, Gazing on the myriad worlds of light, How my heart enlarged! Thought succeeding unto earnest thought, With sublime and pure emotions fraught, And with love surcharged.

Far beyond the glory that we see, Stretches up the vast infinity, Deep and yet more deep What must be riches of the sky, When we gather in so wondrously At one surface sweep?

God, I thank Thee, for the beauty spread, In the time of darkness, o'er my head! Who could miss the sun, Or, amid the shining stars, repent, That the garish, toilsome hours are spent, And his day is done?

When mine eyes behold the shadows grow Long, and longer, and my heart shall know That death's night is nigh, Lord, permit me to look up to Thee, And to revel in the brilliancy Of the Eternal Sky!

A congress of Socialists has been sitting at Paris, which has afforded that laughter-loving city much amusement. The speeches seemed like huge jokes, and the great majority of the workers of Paris hooted at the whole thing. One of the speakers stated that, as French capital yielded a revenue of "several milliards," it would give each person, if equally divided, from 1,200f to 1,500f. He proposed that those who liked to earn something besides should do so, while those preferring a contemplative life would do nothing. He did not, of course, explain how the "several milliards" would still be enjoyed if all or a large majority preferred contemplation to work. A second speaker suggested that property should not be allowed to pass at all except from parent to child, and in that case should be taxed 25 per cent., which in a quarter of a century would effect community of property. A third was indignant at the idea of waiting a quarter of a century, especially as the propertied class would never submit to such a succession, and demanded an immediate revolution. A fourth, apprehending a hitch on the introduction of the new system, advocated the formation of societies to investigate the best means of making land and tools productive on the morrow of the revolution. These 70 revolutionists, moreover, are divided into three sections. One wishes to have the State supreme-that is, for the nation as a unit; a second desires to abolish the State and have no authority above the commune or parish; and a third proposes that the confiscated lands and factories should be let to the highest bidder, which, of course, might result in the revival of capitalists under another

A very intelligent and observing correspondof the Church Bill, which lately passed the German Parliament. It will be seen that it gives nothing like as much as Bismarck asked for. It relieves the spiritual wants of Catholic believers, but does not enable the Government to reor less lenient application of the law. It does not permit the Executive to exempt candidates for livings from the secular examination prescribed, or the reinstatement of Bishops deposed by the Ecclesiastical Court. It simply allows officiating clergymen to extend their clerical functions to parishes deprived of priests in consequence of the Falk Laws. It authorizes the Government to confirm deputy Bishops, elected

The following short but pointed correspondence between an English clergyman of high degree, and the Lord Chancellor of England, will settle a point about the new Burials Bill, which has agitated many a clerical breast:

My Lord—A question of some interest to the Clergy arises on the Burials Bill, as passed in the Lords, to which I should be glad to know, and to communicate, your Lordship's reply. the event of a parishioner being buried with the Office of the Church of England, read by a person not in Holy Orders, can the incumbent prohibit the taking the corpse into the church as directed in the rubric? If not, does the Bill allow a Psalm or Lesson to be read in the church by a person not in Holy Orders, as is now done by the clergyman: having regard to the fact that Psalms are chanted and Lessons read by laymen on Sundays? I have the honor, &c., GEORGE TREVOR, D. D.

The Right Hon. the Lord High Chancellor. (ANSWER.)

DEAR SIR-The Burials Bill does not authorize anything to be done by a layman in the church, but only in the churchyard, and at the grave. If he reads the words of the Church of England's service, he is not, on that account, performing the service according to the rites of the Church of England: and he would have no more right of access to the church, for the purpose of reading any part of that service, than he has under the present state of the law. Of course, therefore, he might be excluded from it, by the same authority and by the same means as now. The law will undergo no alteration in that respect. It appears to me, with all due respect, that those who raise such questions without in-tending to invite demands for more than the Burials Bill concedes, take a course of question-

Our Canadian friends have no due appreciation of the importance of making close connections. As they seem to think, what hetter can befall a man than to tarry half a day here and a day there, and see something of the Dominion, and of Canadian life? We wonder that more do not seek health and recreation by a lake trip. At this time of the year, it is a most delightful change. 1. That, as the service is too long to attract outsiders, as every Southern and Western Missionary knows, a medium of relief may be granted by dividing the Psalter into 31 days. This would remove that "last" psalm, that always seems to make that beautiful exercise prolix instead of wholly enjoyable. Leave off the last Psalm of A. M. and P. M., Day I for example, and see how much more enlivening and edifying this change would make that portion of our devotions. 2. Add vs.18-19 to Psalm 51, in selection 3. This is decidedly more scriptural, and therefore more churchly. Up to vs. 18-19 the Psalm is purely 'spiritual;" then in these verses the Holy Spirit teaches that those who are truly converted will delight in the prayer and sacrament of the Temple

3. Shorten the exhortation, at least by omitting words of similar import. The reason for Latin and Saxon terms being employed no longer prevails. Excise either "acknowledge" confess." etc.

4. Leave the use of the longer exhortation in the Holy Communion optional, as occasions and spiritual conditions might require. This would make both more effective. 5. Omit confesson and absolution, if clergymen will mingle two separate offices, when Morning Prayer is joined to the Holy Communion. Any stranger must see the bare incongruity of confessing that we have been doing nothing but ommit sin, from the time of the first absolution until that of the second. To use Morning Prayer, in this busy nation of ours, when the Holy Communion follows, belittles both Prayer and Communion, and crowds the saving "preaching of the gospel,"into either unseemly hash, or scattering a mistake, as to require another and special absolution within three quarters of an hour.

6. As the successful and laborious Bishop of hesitated to appoint a commission to revise the Prayer Book. Why should we? It is a mission to conquer the world, not a "fetich." Let us have a new Commission to make our services shorter, more lively, more American. The people are slipping away, while we persistently disregard their just wishes

Church Work in Dakota.

I am glad to see from an editorial in your last paper, that you appreciate the situation in the great Northwest. How to meet the growing wants of the Church in that region, will be the great problem for the next General Convention to solve. Dakota has now a population of 175, 000, and the increase will be very rapid in the future. The want of a missiouary on the line of the Northern Pacific, between Fargo and Bismarck, alluded to in your last paper, will now be supplied by Rev. J. G. Miller, my predecessor at Bismarck. He resides at this place, and has not been in active work for some months past. He has now, with the approval of Bishop that place and Bismarck. I trust good results will follow. We shall also start services, at once, at Mandan, a rising town five miles west of Bismarck. Openings for missions are developing on every hand in Northern Dakota, and I find

The Great Emergency.

Correspondence of the Living Church. FARGO, D. T., July, 1880.

In the contemplation of the vast possibilities which this highly favored "New Northwest" suggests to the observant and thoughtful mind, the question of a due provision for the spiritual needs of the population that is pouring into the territory, is one of absorbing interest, and of almost overwhelming difficulty. At a certain point on the line of the N. Pacific Road, west of Fargo, I spent two or three hours, one day, in order to make my observations. It was a place not more than two or three years old, and had from 200 to 300 inhabitants. As I looked westward down the sole buisness street (one side only of which was occupied by buildings), the projecting signboards revealed to me, almost at a glance, the prevailing industries. "Hotel;" "Stores;" 'Dry Goods and Groceries;" "Drug Store," (there were two of these); "Harness Shop; "Blacksmith," and-more numerous than all-Saloons. Then, as I cast my eye over the prairie, a few rods to the north, it fell upon a neat School House, and, a very churchly looking Methodist Place of Worship, approaching completion. Making my way towards it, I encountered a communicative stranger (possibly, the minister himself), from whom I gathered all the information that I needed. The building tion of the St. Paul and the Duluth branches of was to cost $2,000 when completed. two or three generations will hardly more than suffice. For instance, there is the fact that this region is rapidly filling up with a foreign and non-English-speaking population. The Scandinavians are possessing the land. Indeed, I am credibly informed that, from this and other subordinate causes, no more than one-third of the entire population of Minnesota is at pres. ent accessible to our missionaries. This one fact serves to illustrate the peculiar difficulties, often of a purely local character, with which our Bishops have to contend; and how much, in the arrangements of their campaigns, must necessa. rily be left to their individual wisdom and expe-

Is This an Unbelieving Age?

We often hear it said that we live in an unbelieving and sceptical age. There is no little ground for the assertion. Yet it is never well to accept an assertion as true often. If, when men say that this is an unbelieving and sceptical age, they mean that it is characterized by a great deal of religious unrest and unsettlement, it is inage, they make an assertion unwarranted by the facts of the past, and untrue to those of the present. Save the Apostolic age, none more than this has been characterized by great missionary effort or by greater or grander missionary success; this, too, in the face of no ordinary difficulties. The broken and divided state of Christianity sadly impedes all Christian work at home and abroad. It is being carried on in a way which, in ordinary business affairs, would be seen to be reckless extravagance as to men and means and methods.

Nor are these the worst evils of our unhappy divisions. There can be no doubt but that very much of the scepticism and unbelief, of which we hear so much, is directly traceable to the many-voiced, variant teaching heard on every side. But in face of these great impediments to the evangelization of the world, a grand work is going on at home and abroad. Since the Apostolic age no generation has made greater efforts than our own for the cause of Christ. Nor have any efforts in times past been blessed with more signal success. No generation has sent forth more heroic heralds of the Cross. An age that has produced such saints and heroes as Selwyn and Patteson and Keble and Kemper, will never be spoken of in days to come as that of an evil and unbelieving generation. Of both clergy and laity, scores might be named who would have adorned any age.

But, if this be so, it may be said, "how cause it is that of our day. It by no means istic feature of our time. The scepticism of many comes from "an evil heart of unbelief." They do not believe because they do not want to believe. They misbelieve because they want a belief suited to their life. But many do not know what to believe; they do not know what the Christian Faith is. Denominations that do not have any common faith cannot teach any. Those under their guidance cannot be expected to distinguish between that which is of the Faith and that which is mere opinion. And no doubt a great multitude have drifted into a vague sort of unbelief because they have been required to believe sort." too much. A man may be led to think that Christianity is not for him because he has found it impossible to experience anything like that sort of religious chills-andfever which he has been taught to think a prerequisite to a Christian life. A large class, too, have been taught that they must know all about "God's Eternal Decrees;" but, being modest men, they cannot say that they do. Thousands have been required to believe in the infallibility of that amiable but narrow-minded old gentleman known as Pius IX. and in a mass of modern additions to the Faith, which the vast majority of the saints at rest never thought of believing.

We suggest that when this is taken into account the present unrest and unsettlement of multitudes in our day is not very much to be wondered at. It is plain that in the one old, historic Faith of Christendom, there is nothing that need seem a thing hard to be believed by the most intelligent and cultivated of our day. According to this account the faces of the chiefs were very radiant, which agrees with our own impressions of this class of Indians. There are some things, however, in the narrative, that pass the comprehension of the LIVING CHURCH, on the supposition that these were Virginia Indians. For instance, some are described as clergy men. We have heard of wooden clergymen, but we had never supposed that any could be mistaken for parsons. We might imagine them to be editors, but clergymen, never. Upon further reflection we are forced to the conclusion that the tautalogical Churchman (for how can a Churchman be anything else than evangelical?) means the Bishop of Minnesota, and the printer is responsible for the blunder. Work in the "Pocket Dioceses."

It has become the custom among certain Churchmen, who seem to fancy that the Guardian-ship of the Church rests upon them, to sneer at what they are pleased to term "pocket dioceses." One diocese particularly singled out for attack seems to be that of Springfield. Why this is so, we do not presume to say. If Springfield is a pocket diocese, it will take a large pocket to hold and conceal it, and we hope the above mentioned guardians will be duly prepared. Their pocket will need to be larger if the present ratio of work and increase in pocket dioceses continues from the Presbyterian Interior: "Our year by year, and there is no reason to Since Bishop Seymour's consecration, at EASTER.—Entered into rest, on Wednesday, Aug. 18th. 1880, at Jacksonville, Ill., Freder-ick W. Easter, son of the Rev. J. D. Easter, D. D., aged 20 years.

WALKER .- At "Overlook," Omaha, the residence of Bishop Clarkson, Miss Charlotte Drummond Walker, for several years the Principal Teacher in the Collegiate Department of Brownell Hall. "For so He giveth His Beloved, sleep."

McKIMMIN.—On Thursday, July 29th, 1880, at her residence, near Pulaski, Tenn., Mrs. Jane B. McKimmin, in her 86th year.

Fourteen years of suffering, of patience, of earnest faith, made her life an example of submission and humility to us all; of that "affliction which is but for a moment," and which worketh for them who bear it," "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." For in His own good time God hath blessed her; now no weakness of the flesh impedes her growth in Grace and in with the usual vacations. the knowledge of her Lord, there, where is no more sorrow nor pain, where the sunshine of God's countenance falls ever brighter and brighter, where the Lamb feeds His Own, and leads them to the Living Fountains, and wipes away all tears from their eyes. Eternal rest grant her, O Lord! and let light perpetual shine upon her!

Those desiring a good school for their daughters, a school presenting the inducements of reasonable charges, beautiful location, experienced teachers and all the improvements that go to make up a thorough course of instruction, will find it in the Poughkeepsie Academy, New York. Rev. D. G. Wright, D. D., is the princi-

West Chestnut Street Institute, West Philadelphia, is among the best schools of its kind in the country. It is, not only professedly, but really, a home school. Regular and special courses are provided, and the means of instruccourses are provided, and the means of instruc-tion and care taken always insure true education Miss Mittleberger's School in its scholars. Mrs. J. A. Bogardus, a woman of long experience in teaching, is the principal.

THE SUBURBAN HOME SCHOOL in New Haven, No. 1 Sylvan Avenue, the Rev. Alonzo G. Shears, M. A., M. D., Rector, has been long known as a practical Family School. It was founded in 1853, by Dr. Shears, and is intended for young boys; orphan children, lads whose parents wish to travel, and others who for any reason cannot receive proper care and instruction at their own homes, are taken into the family of the Rector and treated like his own children. The number of pupils is small, and the location unexcelled for beauty and healthfulness. The highest testimonials accompany the annual cir-

St. Johns Baptist's Church School. The Church is fast meeting the objection that those who do not understand matters have urged against Church Schools, in comparison with those of Rome. It is intended that Saint John the Baptist School, New York city, Stuyvesant Square, shall offer all the inducements that any school can have. From the size and locality of the grounds it equals those situated in smaller places, while its nearness to the extra means of cultivation afforded by a large city, makes it unusually desirable. It is intended that museums and other means of instruction shall be visited from time to time, and pupils, whose parents may desire it, will have the advantage of attending the excellent course of art, provided at the wellknown Cooper Institute, with no additional expense. The School is under the care of a sisterhood, of which Dr. Houghton is Rector, and Bishop Potter Visitor, and everything that goes to make a successful school is guaranteed. Connected with the work of the Sisterhood is the art and embroidery department, already well and favorably known for the work produced. Everything in the way of clerical and Church regalia is made, and properly and artistically embroidered by them. This Sisterhood is a reality in Church work, about which there can be no question.

In conclusion, your committee cannot too highly commend what has seemed to them the marked and distinguishing features of this institution, the happy combination of the military system of instruction with the departments of science and of literary culture, and the more ennobling culture of the heart and soul. Nowhere else have we seen this combination so complete and perfect. We cannot speak of it too highly. It is such a system as fits a pupil for life and for death. Under its guidance he is sure to tread always the path of duty, virtue, and honor.

TWENTY-EIGHTH YEAR.—COURSES OF STUDY.
Classics, Modern Languages, Mathematics, etc., to prepare for advanced standing at the Universities; for West Point, Annapolis, or business; adapted to the wants of boys from ten to twenty years of age.
Location.—The College Domain of three hundred and sixty-four acres, two and a half miles below Niagara Falls, extends for half a mile along the most picteresque part of the Niagara River, and is wholly devoted to the uses of the institution. Its healthfulness is unsurpassed. Six trunk lines of railway intersect at Suspension Bridge.

BUILDINGS.—The College Edifice contains Chapel, School and Recitation Rooms, Library and Reading Room, Dormitories and Commons-Rooms; it has steam, gas, ample bathing facilities, excellent ventilation, and every needful appliance of health, comfort, and efficient administration. The School-Room has been professionally examined by an oculist, and its lighting pronounced typical and beyond criticism; the desks have folding lids to serve as book rests, and to enable pupils to study in an erect posture with the book at a proper distance frem the eye. The Gymnasium is new, large, and well appointed.

ORGANIZATION, PHYSICAL CULTURE, ETC.—The entire household constitutes, and is treated as, a single family. The formal Organization, Routine, and Discipline are military; at Drill, breech-loading rifles of the Remington "Civil Guard" pattern, made to special order, are carried by Cadets five feet or more in height. The Campus is admirably laid out as a Parade Ground. Athletic sports are heartily encouraged, and the opportunities are unrivalled.

Here is an incident, true in every detail, which may serve as a text for some of our readers to preach themselves a sermon, as they idle away the summer Sunday morning on the mountains or by the beach.

Three or four years ago a half drunken young fellow, driving furiously along a crowded street, ran over a little child and hurt his spine. The boy was the son of a poor cobbler. His bed was a straw pallet on a garret floor. When the injury was pronounced incurable, he was removed from the hospital to this bed. There was nothing for him to look forward to, but years of misery in the filth and half darkness of the wretched garret. His mother was dead. His father, in the shop below. could barely keep them from starving, The young fellow who hurt him was sorry but what could he do? He was a fast clerk on a small salary. Now and then a kindly Irishman, on the lower floor, as wretched as themselves, would run up to "hearten the creature up a bit;" but that was all. The only view from the square window was a corner of the next roof, and the event of the day, for the miserable cripple, was to see the cats climb along it, or fight each other. Foul smells and foul language came up from the rooms below to him. There seemed to be no other possible chance for his life, than to die down into still more brutal ignorance and misery, or to go out like an ill-smelling flame into the eternal night.

Now, just at that time, a little English lad, who had come with his father to visit the Centennial Exposition, while passing along a quiet street of the city in which the cripple lived, saw some pale-faced children peering at him, out of the windows of a large house, set back among the trees. Over the gate was the name "Children's Hospital." The boy's kindly English heart was touched; he turned and went in, joked and played awhile with the poor babies, and when he went back to his notel, wrote to his mother of the pleasant, sunny rooms, with flowers in the windows and pictures on the walls, and the motherly nurses taking care of the little children. "I have seen nothing which pleased me better in America," he said; "I will go again and tell you about it when I come home."

He never went home. The gallant little lad was taken back dead to his mother a few weeks later. After the violence of her grief was past, in her many efforts to show her gratitude to the people who had nursed and been kind to her boy, she asked to be allowed to endow a memorial bed in the little hospital which had pleased him so much, and directed that it should be filled with the most miserable, needy case, known to the managers. So it came to pass that our little cripple, on a warm spring day, was carried out of his garret, bathed and laid on a pure white bed in a sunny, pleasant room. The other children, in the ward, called to him and made acquaintance; there were toys, books, pictures for them all. The good woman who lifted him smiled at him; he thought his mother must have looked like that. Outside, the maples reddened in the sun and rustled in at the windows, and the robins chirped and built their nests. There were dainty little meals brought to him. There was the best skill the city could command given to effect his cure. Good women, with their hearts full of Christ's love, came to teach him, and tell him of this unknown Saviour. At his bedhead hangs a little card which he probably never has read or understood: "In memory of Richard-, of Sussex, England."

Something in this little story hints, in a dim way of the infinite inextricable tangle of human lives and their inexorable influence on each other. When the English lad obeyed the generous impulse to give a moment's pleasure to the little children as he passed, how could he tell that he lifted this other life up into the sunshine for all time? "The word that we speak to day," says the Arab proverb, "shall it not meet us, again and again, at the turning of the ways, to show how it has cursed and blessed our fellow?"

FIFTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY. LESSON, JUDGES VI:11-16; VII:19-22.

narrative, are the Midianites. The origin of this people may be referred to Midian, Gen. xxv:2. Taking the mention of the Ishmaelites, Judges viii:24, as implying a mingling of the descendants of Ishmael and Midian, we have the people now generally known as Arabs.

A mere glance at the character of the people invading host, stirs the heart of Gideon, and, the third in size in the State. being filled with the spirit of the Lord, he "blew a trumpet, and Abi-ezer was gathered after him;" which means that he stirred up his townsmen to an active resistance of the enemy. His patriotic effort is aided by the men of Asher, Zebulon, and Nephtali; but before venturing upon a positive encounter, he seeks assurance of victory from God, by means of a sign. Dew has ever been held as a symbol of divine favor, the fleece is symbolical of the chosen people, the flock. The dew upon the fleece alone is a sign of God's mercy towards Israel, and is a sign of assurance to Gideon that the Giver of all good will continue His favor to Israel. The second sign of the dry fleece upon the bedewed ground, recalls chapter Dear Sirvi:13. Israel is in affliction, though they are tenance because of their sin. Since God imposes of the multitude may have discouraged Gideon, but this sign reassures him, and he proceeds to attack them on the plain of Esdraelon.

The next point of interest is the reduction of the forces which accompany Gideon. Doubtless, every sufferer at the hands of the Midianites had every sufferer at the hands of the Midianites had ville, Ind., to live, and there he bought one of joined himself to Gideon; this material would be vour Pads, and he writes that he feels well and unreliable in the event of a conflict, hence, the Lord suggests to Gideon the Mosaic proclamation to the weak and fearful, Deut. xx:1. The result of this proclamation lessened the people by twenty-two thousand, leaving but ten thousand ner. willing to engage in the desperate undertaking. Even this number the Lord declares too many, and by another test, at the spring of trembling, his followers are reduced to three hundred. By another sign, v. 13, Gideon is encouraged in his ple who cannot recover, are often reduced to undertaking; the stratagem employed is recounted in verses 19 to 22. They were admirably adapted to strike a panic terror into the huge and undisciplined host. The stillness of the night being that amount will be used for its support. Any suddenly disturbed, in three different directions, sum will be acceptable, and acknowledgement by the flashing torches, and the reverberating sounds of the trumpets and voices, one cannot be astonished by their sudden and complete overhrow. We must remember that the sound of kindly consented to take charge of this fund. 300 trumpets would suggest the presence of so July 29th. Employees of Illinois Central many companies of the enemy. The war-cry is "for Jehovah and for Gideon;" "the sword" is an interpolation. The stratagem was successful; the Midianites fled to the Jordan; here they were met by the men of Ephraim, to whom word had been sent. Here, in a second fight, the princes Oreb and Zeeb, the crow and the wolf, were slain. Gideon afterwards followed the defeated enemy across the Jordan, and, in another battle, and by the [death of Zebah and Zalmunnah, completed the deliverance of his country. After this, there was peace to Israel for 40 years. Two incidents, in the later life of Gideon, call for mention: He refused the offer of a kingship over the people, on the ground that God was King; and he caused an "ephod" to be made and consecrated, from the Midianites' spoils, which proved to the Israelites in after-days a tempta-tion to idolatry. Gideon is mentioned by St. Paul in his catalogue of faithful worthies, Heb.
