The Revs. Mr. Wong, Senior Chinese Priest, and Mr. Zu Sung Yeu, deacon, were also in the chancel.

Mr. Graves, as is well known, is stationed at Wuchang; Mr. Sowerby goes back with him, the two being the whole body of Foreign Clergy in Wuchang and Hankow, and both of them but recently arrived.

On the day following the above ordination, four Native Candidates, were admitted to the congregation, active and earnest in the Master's Sacred order of Deacons, viz: Wu Tsing T'san, Hwa Sz Chia, Ss Yun Yu, and Chu Yu T'ang. The Rev. Mr. Wong delivered the sermon, and the Rev. W. J. Boone presented the candidates.

Thus grad- of the Guild. Here is an opportunity for perually and surely is our force of native Clergy on the increase. It is our aim and purpose to send them out thoroughly prepared in every respect known them in well organized Guilds, in for their work. But it requires a bravery, a which the whole work of the Parish was reprefaith, and an endurance on their part, which is hardly understood at home. There is insult, derision, ridicule, taunting, and sometimes persecution to be endured, at least such was my experience in Wuchang, by those who dare to stand up before their own countrymen, acquaintances and relatives, and for the simple love of Jesus, preach the good news of Salvation. It is no small thing to endure the accusation of being in the pay of the Foreigners, and so far disloyal to their own country and her ancient traditions.

I ask the daily prayers of the Church, especially for these young men, as well as for all the other native and Foreign Clergy and candidates; we all need more than I can tell, the help of God; Brethren, pray for us; not now and then, but daily.

There are besides these young men above mentioned, five Candidates at work at Wuchaug and Hankow; two of these have more than fulfilled their probation, and will probably be ordained next Spring. In the Theological School there are now five Candidates admitted this year; there are now nee Candidates admitted this year; they are from Wuchang; have studied for several years in the Boone Memorial School there, as well as the College here, and are now to receive four year's instruction before being sent out for work; they are studying English diligently in addition to their other studies, and already can read, understanding several Chapters in the Gospels-once in possession of English and the world of theology-Church History and devotional reading, as well as the current literature and news, will be open to them for their own use and for translation for the use of others. The LIVING CHURCH will teach and entertain them regularly. It is not unlikely that at no distant future Native Clergy may be appointed to chairs in the Theological School. A knowledge of English would make this possible.

It can readily be understood that the proper training of the native Clergy is of the very first importance; the history of the early Church is in great part a history of the many heresies that arose when Christianity began to leaven the old heathen countries. It is to be expected that Budhism, Taouism, Confucianism, and the unnumbered other sects of heathenism, will not leave the truth untouched. Then too, dissenting bodies of all shades are teaching their peculiar heresies to the native Christians. Romanism is vigorous, and the future Irenæus or Athanasius must be made strong in the Faith. China is the Dragon's Stronghold; driven from realm to realm, he has retreated to this as his last ground; there will be a hard struggle; On St. Simon and St. Jude's day, ordination and first of all his attacks will be made, and are will and device of the adversary will be put ask the constant and diligent prayers of the ly. Church Guilds .- II.

Written for the Living Church.

Church Guilds are sometimes composed of and apparently limited to, a few women in the work.

This is by no means the best and most effectual way of forming a Guild, and should be guarded against, and these workers themselves, instead of quietly and faithfully performing all the duties in their power, should endeavor to school for a long term of years. They were in- enlist others. The old, the young, and the midstructed in theology by Bishop Williams, and dle aged should be brought in and interested in after that in the Theological School at St. John's the cause. I make no distinction here in the work of our rich or our poorer congregations. I hold that it should differ more in quantity than in quality; in the amount given and spent upon the bjects before the society, than in the objects themselves. For instance, there comes in every Parish the care of the Church building and the Sacred Vessels, and the decorations for Holy Seasons: the Poor, who are, according to our Saviour's words, "always with us;" the Sunday school, which eeds the best talent, and the most faithful workers we have. The music for the week day service, if not for Sunday, comes frequently upon the Guild, and would be much better supplied if it always did.

"With a Difference." Correspondence of the Living Church.

The Presbyterian congregation of this city (Rochester) have recently been favored with a visit from the Corresponding Secretary of "The Presbyterian Board of Missions for Freedmen.' Dr. Allen is a Southerner-the child of a slave owner. He pleads the cause of the Southern Negro most eloquently—is perfectly acquainted with his subject-and he cannot fail in securing his object: the support by Northern congregations of colored missionaries in this field. "Give us four hundred dollars a year," he says, "and we will send a man educated and fitted for the work where he can do the most good. That man will be an assistant preacher of this congregation—you will keep yourselves in communication with him, and he will occasionally come here and preach for you-telling you all about his

Now, last year the Presbyterians gave over one hundred thousand dollars for the colored work. The Church gave less than seventeen thousand.

The Presbyterians have three chartered educational institutions in the Carolinas-two Normal Schools, three Graded Schools-one in Georgia, one in Tennessee, and one in North Carolina -and four common Parochial Schools. They have fifty-one ordained colored clergy, most of them in large fields, including, in some cases, seven churches. Their Freedmen's Missionary Association not only sends Dr. Allen to plead with the churches at the North, but it scatters little leaflets, telling all about the work, just where the schools are situated, and how the work may be helped. Under "How you can help us," we find the following:

"By seeing that your church contributes regularly to the cause. Last year, 3,363 of our 5,489 churches gave nothing. Was your church among

We should hardly like to publish alongside of that statement the number of our own churches in the land, and the number that gave nothing to the Freedmen. And how would our list of educational institutions compare with that of our Presbyterian friends?

Biddle University, at Charlotte, N. C., for young colored men, was planted by the Presbyterians at the very close of the war, in the midst of a vast Negro population, to raise up preachers and teachers of their own race. It stands as her future college and theological seminary for all the Atlantic States south of Virginia. The value of the grounds and buildings is $41,000. It has six well qualified Professors, and seven English tutors. The graduates of this University may be found all over the South, and several of them have spoken on the floor of the General Assembly.

So much for the work of the Presbyterians. Last year the American Missionary Association, the organ of the Congregationalists, gave over three hundred ihousand dollars to this work. It has given since 1862 over four millions

Now, brethren, it will not do for us to excuse ourselves longer on the plea of the hurt we sustained in the time of the Revolution-that we then as the Church of England, fell far behind in numbers of the denominations-for the most lamentable feature in this case is our lack of zeal, rather than our lack of money-our indifference seemingly-our placid willingness to let the denominations do this work if they will—the sects who have never taken to themselves that name of "holy catholic."

In the report of the Baptist Home Missionary Society for 1882, we find that the Baptists gave last year to the Freedmen, over forty-six thousand dollars. "Before another eighteen years," says its Secretary, "at the same ratio of increase, the colored Baptists of the country will be more than the entire Baptist strength of the continent to-day.

What wonder that the Secretary of a Board of Missions, outside of our Church, should write: 'It is incredible when we consider how large and how wealthy the Episcopal Church is, that it gave less than seventeen thousand dollars last year for the colored work."

What is the obstruction? "This work cannot be done with the present machinery," says the Christian Register. Then let us have an improved machinery, lest the proof of the true Messiahship be found lacking in the Church. and "the poor have not the gospel preached un-J. M. PARKER.

Incidents of Church-work among the Germans in Iowa. Correspondence of the Living Church.

Some time since I was called on by a German Roman Catholic family to bury an only child, around which their affections had become closely entwined. They knew of no German priest whom they could obtain, and the parents could not speak English. I readily consented on condition that they would assume the responsibility of a Protestant Minister officiating in their Consecrated ground. This assumed, I remarked that if there was anything they would like to have in the burial Service, I would gladwith the suggestion, and remarked that I would do so. As we entered the Cemetery gate, I got out of the buggy, and having put on my surplice, I walked slowly in advance of the procession, repeating the sentences. After the coffin was lowered into the grave, I requested all the Germans, Protestants as well as Romanists, to repeat the Apostle's Creed in concert with me. They did so, loudly and reverently, (for all Germans learn this formula in their Parish Schools in the Old country) and at the name of Jesus there was a simultaneous bow.

I am free to confess I was much impressed at the appropriateness of Christians unitedly confessing at the mouth of the grave, this summary of Gospel truth, on which our hopes of a blessed immortality are centered. It brings in review and in rapid succession these great truths before the mind. At the border of the open grave we seem like a company on the shore of the ocean over which we have determined to cross at a convenient time for a new home. In that creed we express anew our pledge to Almighty God of our allegiance to him, and are strengthened by the comforting doctrines of His holy Gospel. Indeed, it seemed to me at that time, and frequently since, that it might be proper when the occasion indicated it fitting, to rehearse, when we stand at the open grave, this glorious formulary of our faith. And as the enrichment of our Liturgy is somewhat engaging the mind of the Church now, might not the rehearsal of the Creed at the grave, be thought permissible?

I will mention another incident. At a recent Cottage meeting, some distance from Fairfield, I had occasion to baptize two children of different German families. The parents had been but a short time in this country. They were Lutherans, and from the humbler walks of life, but as is wont to be the case, well instructed in the teachings of their Church and in Bible history.

I took with me a number of German Prayer Books, and made a few explanatory remarks, showing the nature and need of baptism, how by this Sacrament, native pollution is washed away, and we are engrafted into the Body of Christ; and reading from the Catechism that its inward and spiritual grace signifies "A death unto sin, and a new birth unto righteousness; for being by nature born in sin and the children of wrath, we are hereby made the children of grace," I read the entire service. All were deeply interested. I was much impressed with the reverence shown by the rarents during the service. At the name of Jesus, the women dropped a courtery, and the men bowed. They also read in a clear voice the responses.

After the service, the parents expressed their admiration of the service, saying: "That is just what our Church teaches us." They were especially delighted with the positive statement in regard to the Wiedergeburt, (regeneration) saying, "that is one of the principal things in the Sacrament, and that from this truth, the baptism of children derives its great sanctity and that all our Church people had the intelligence and confidence to make such a confession.

It was also a grateful piece of information to degree of confidence that existed between the Reformers of the Church of England and the Lutheran Reformers of Germany during the Sixteenth Century, and that our Reformers derived valuable help from the Augsburg Confesthe persecution which followed the Reformation, many of their eminent divines fled to England. Prominent among these were Martin Bucer and Peter Martyr. And such was the confidence and sympathy between them, that these celebrated divines were invited by Archbishop Cranmer to come to England. They went, and Peter Martyr was appointed to a professorship at Oxford, and Martin Bucer was assigned a professorship at Cambridge; and on account of his deep and varied learning, both in Greek and Hebrew; and also on account of his well balanced(mind and deep piety, good Edward VI, became so interested in Bucer, that he had elegant quarters prepared for him at the University, and on learning that he suffered from the cold of the climate, he sent him a hundred crowns to buy a German stove.

These incidents pleased our German Company. Indeed, a disinterested spectator would have thought from the unanimity which prevailed, that the Lutheran Church and the Episcopal had become to all appearance, one, as two drops of water when they come in contact, run into each other.

On my way home I was startled with the novel, yet pleasant reflection, that I had reconciled Rome, Luther and the Episcopal Church. J. HOCHULY.

Bishop Huntington in a recent address, speaking of the objections which some make to the Church Temperance Society as being extra Canonical, unchurchly, &c., said: "The Son of man, who is Lord of the Sabbath, is Lord of rubrics and canons. May we be delivered from the timid counsels of Churchmen, who would rather have the Church a Pharisee, an owl, a Snail, a mummy, than that it should do something that it never did before." That has the grave." I was at once favorably impressed is an advance in other ways than in ri ual.

Letters to Laymen.—VI.

Our Homes.

My Brother: What is your ideal of a home and of home-life? Does it consist first or chiefly in dreams of a stately mansion, ceiled with cedar, painted with vermillion, and filled with things rich and rare? I hope not. You may be sure that his must be a poor and common mind whose thought of a home consists chiefly in the mere surroundings and trappings of life. God made man for high and noble things, and he cannot descend to the plane of lower orders of existence without putting himself in a worse state than theirs. It is well enough for sheep or goat to have every hope centered in stall, feed, and water, but let one made in the image of God deliberately accept that as the summum bonum and he puts himself on a lower level than that of the beasts that perish. No, you may be sure that no home can be made by the house-builder or house-furnisher or decorator. Its true glory is not in the things that are seen but in the unseen, in mental conditions, in moral attributes, above all in spiritual elements.

But think of some of those things in particular which ought to characterize every real, certainly every Christian home. For one thing, refinement ought to characterize it. It costs nothing. It is not that which can be bought or sold. It is a spirit, an element, an atmosphere, easy enough to discern if hard to define in any satisfactory way. It might be, and ought to be, a characteristic of every Christian household. It is just as easily discerned in the cottages of the poor as in the palaces of the rich. And how much it goes for! If in passing along a street you should want to make an inquiry of some sort, how inevitably would you turn to the nearest presentable house. Should you look up to a row of cottages and notice that some one in particular had a cared-for appearance, adorned with a trailing vine over the door or a box of flowers in the window, how instinctively would you turn to that door to make your inquiry. You would know that there you would meet with courteous regard. And you would be quite as likely to meet with it in the cottage as in the mansion. You have only to cross the threshold of a house in order to notice the presence or the absence of that which is the essence of real refinement. You note it not simply or chiefly in appearances, butin voice, in manner, in face, dress and bearing, in the tone and atmosphere of the place. Nor does it depend upon wealth or the absence of it, but in reality, in unpretentiousness, in sincerity and courtesy. And all this you have seen in the well-ordered though humble abodes of comparative poverty. How quickly too, will you note it or its absence in the houses of the rich. The houses of a certain block may be just alike in plan and architecture, but how unlike they may be in everything else. From one you may turn without regret at leaving it, while perhaps in the very next one you experience a sense of obligatory nature." I could not help wishing satisfaction that leads you to linger there and makes you want to return thither. What makes the difference, the vast difference? It is certainly not a matter of carpets, pictures, or upholstery, them, when I told them of the friendship and but of people, of the spirit which you meet in the one house and do not find in the other.

The home that is characterized by courtesy and refinement is sure to be an attractive one, and the very chiefest element of true courtesy is a really Christian spirit. The very best descripsion, drawn up by Melancthon; and that during tion of real courtesy ever yet given is that which St. Paul gives of Christian Charity, and that great apostle himself is the very best specimen that history affords of the true gentleman. No Lord Chesterfield can tell you how to be one. But St. Paul does. If you want to be one, read often the xiii. chapter of I Corinthians, and by God's grace try to have what He therein enjoins. We are told the nurse of James I. followed him into England and begged him to take her son and make him a gentleman. The King said: "Woman, I might make him an earl or a knight, but to make him a gentleman passeth the power of any human potentate," Yes, so it is. But what no man living can make us, the Holy Ghost can and will, if only we will let Him. That Gift of all gifts may be had for the asking. Said our Saviour: "If ye being evil know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your Heavenly Father give the Holy Ghost to them that ask Him."

> A circular has been issued to the alumni and friends of Trinity College, Hartford, urging a "completer" apparatus and endowment for astronomical study and observation. The astronomers of the German government selected the grounds of Trinity College for their temporary observatory, on the occasion of the recent transit of Venus. Other needs of the college requiring aid, are a residence for the President, a gymnasium, a library building, a hall, a museum, a new chapel, and scholarships. The circular calls attention to the fact, that if the sons of Churchmen, now in residence at Harvard and Yale, were to be transferred to Trinity, the latter would at once stand at the head of American colleges in numerical strength.

The Rev. Dr. E. N. Potter, President of Unlike to have in the burial Service, I would gladly do it if I could. The father remarked, "we would like to have the Apostle's Creed said at will leave her far behind. Let us see that there some time ago.

Fourth Sunday in Advent.

NOTE.—As the fourth Sunday in Advent this year falls upon the Eve of the Feast of the Nativity, the requirements of our Christmas issue compelled the consideration of its Collect to give place to the Oollect for the Nativity. As, however, that Collect serves for the Sunday after Christmas leaving a vacant space in our columns we insert the following, though out of its order, thus preserving the completeness of the series.—ED.

O Lord, raise up, we pray thee thy power, and come among us, and with great might succour us; that whereas, through our sins and wickedness, we are sore let and hindered in running the race that is set before us, thy bountiful grace and mercy may speedily help and deliver us; through the satisfaction of thy Son our Lord. to whom with thee and the Holy Ghost be honour and glory, world without end. Amen.

Oratio. Excita, quæsumus, Domine, potentiam Tuam, et veni, et magna nobis virtute succurre; ut per auxilium gratiæ Tuae, quod nostra peccata præpediunt, indulgentiæ Tuae propitiationis acceleret. Qui vivis.

This collect is a version and variation of the ancient Latin, which appears both in Roman and Sarum Uses, and is traceable to the sacramentaries of SS. Gregory and Gelasius. It brings us, therefore, for the first time in our Christian Year, into worshipful union in this part of our Liturgy, with both the ancient Anglican and Roman branches of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church. Thanks be to God! that estranged as some of us are from the others, and they from us; and surrounded as we are by the sad fragments severed from that Church, by her own unfaithfulness, corruption, and discord; we can yet be one in our prayers before the Holy Altar of our one blessed Sacrifice. When shall we again become altogether one; and for our oneness as the risen life of new purity and peace the world rise up and call us blessed!

The invocation, O Lord, is, unlike the manner of most Collects, brief, informal, rather than tion, and missionary enterprise within the past expanded, deliberate and deferential. Taken in fifty years may be profitable, if it be used not connection with the first petition, raise up Thy | for self-satisfaction, but for stimulation in the power, which, in each of those particulars, is in new century of our national existence soon to close accord with it; it bursts upon the ear, as begin. the sudden outcry of one in danger and distress. Similar impassioned beginnings of prayer, though differing in form, strength and object, occur in the ancient Collects. Somehow in those olden times, either [there were greater tribulations for God's children; or they more keenly sense of God's presence and power as a necessary and all-sufficient help, was more deep and devout than it is now. If If it was so, who shall state, theirs was not the favored condition?

But the petition for the stirring or raising up Hence, we beseech? Him, as accepting our reus, but from the more subtle and dangerous ones within us. That they are such, appears from the succeeding petition, [and with great might succor us, no common measure of divine efficiency being regarded as at all equal to our spiritual extremity. Happy would it be for us, if in the spirit of this petition, we were always more sensible of the fact, that in the spiritual life. a man's foes are they of his own household, his most powerful and most pitiless foes, those of

The Collectinow plainly sets forth, as it ought, -for it is no less a confession than a prayer,the nature of those inward foes, and the character of the evil they work in and for us. Not now, with repentance and faith, among those through the natural ills of this mortal life, nor indeed through the besetment of our outward we brought into the present distress. And it is robbed of our purity or disturbed in our peace, that distresses us, and drives us to seek the power of divine aid. To stop with these considerations, would be in some sort an exhibition of spiritual selfishness, a caring only for ourselves. and not for God. The true soul looks beyond itself, and is anxious not so much about good to be received, as good works to be done; and that. not in the spirit of the young man's desire, "that and devotion of the Master's words, "That man may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." It sees in the incitements held out by Him, and for the glory of His grace. To be hindered, or to be brought to a pause in that race, is to cast doubt upon the truth of His word, the wisdom of His plans, the sufficiency of His aid, and the worth of the professed effort to serve and glorify, Him. Hence, the earnest cry for deliverance from those retarding or obstructing sins, through God's bountiful grace and mercy, that we may see not only with patience, but with joy, the race set before

Noticeably, also, all this is implored, not as is common in the Collects in a general form, multiplied services of every sort, from the quiet through Jesus Christ our Lord, nor even more composure of the Church's Daily Order to the

but in a specific doctrinal recognition of the expiatory character of the atonement, through the satisfaction of Jesus Christ our Lord. This somewhat unusual dogmatic character in the to of that grace-giving sacramental ordinance close of a Collect is still further strengthened by the bolder and simpler teaching of doctrine, the ascription which distinctly sets forth our slike in sermons-which are lessening in mere Lord's divinity, and His co-equal dignity with the Father and the Holy Ghost, in the Holy, Blessed and ever Glorious Trinity. Nor is this strange, or a matter of chance, or without special wisdom in its design. It will be noticed that -with the exception of the Collect for the second Sunday in Advent,—throughout Advent and Christmas-tide, there is in each Collect a similar recognition of the Son's equality with the other thoughts of her worshipping children forward to the contemplation of our Lord's coming in His Humanity, the Church strives with all the solemnity of the contemplation of His second coming as the Final Judge, to impress upon them the fact of His being a true divine Person, so that even in the cradle of His blessed human infancy, they shall behold the mystery of the ev-

In closing it may be observed that while the ry ago. Collect varies somewhat from the original, it is one of those which happily have been rather improved than impaired by expansion. Truth so rich, so suggestive, so vital, needed to be held longer before the thought. It has gained also a more stately dignity in style, and, for our English speech a nobler rythm. It falls impressively on the ear; is most becoming to reverential lips; may most profitably be a living part of the minds' furniture of thought; and must be a motion and a glow in the heart's pulses of love and devotion, if that heart be one in which Christ dwells as the hope of glory.

The Past Fifty Years.

BY THE BISHOP OF ALBANY. (From the Church Almanac for 1881.)

A survey of the growth in the Church and with it, of Catholic teaching, religious educa-

That is to say, Evangelicalism has become more Catholic and Catholicity more evangelical, using the terms of the Schools. And the power of the Church to-day, in England and America, is in this fact. The mission preachers of our time, holding most strenuously the sacertotal and scacramental elements of the divine Institution, the Church, are the strong ad vocates of conversion, of personal faith and holiness, of the spiritual life. And on the other hand, the doctrine of "baptism and of the laying on of hands," that is to say, of grace in Sacraments and of the grace of Orders, finds place who once degraded them from their equal position in St. Paul's enumeration of the principles foes, the flesh, the world, and the devil, but of the doctrine of Christ. Let us give God the through our own sins and wickedness, are glory, and recognize the courage of the men who dared, in the days when Catholicity was mistaken neither, that through them we are inwardly for its spurious counterfeit of Romanism, or in the dry days of cold and lifeless formalism, to prefer principles to popularity, and to insist upon declaring the whole council of God. Under the gradual uplifting to stronger and higher holding of the ancient faith one cannot too thankfully own the drawing together of men of diverse views, so that such antagonisms and contentions as embittered religious controversy with individual persecution have become impossible. And I may inherit eternal life," but, in the wisdom the fact must not be lost sight of, in measuring the great advance in the consistency of teaching and of practice, that it has come about, not by the unassimilated absorption of one party into Christian life a race divinely set before us, to be another, but by a better understanding among run, through strength given us by God, under men, by a kindlier construction of motives and beliefs, by a larger charity, that does not tolerate, but claims and rejoices in the varying opinions where unity in essentials exists; and by the impartation, each to each, of the best characteristic elements of thought and principle from one body of men to the other. The salient points that tell what fifty years have wrought in doctrine and worship are such as these: Far greater reverence and care in the conduct of Divine service and in the administration of the Holy Sacraments, and greater importance attached to them;

frequency and fervency of Holy Communions

> EDUCATION. Christian education, as this Church understands it, is an education in the distinctive principles of the Catholic Faith. The Church's work will remain undone until she asserts and is enabled to discharge the duty of the training, the discipline, and the indoctrinating of her own children. It is a matter of regret that the valuable appendix referred to in the admirable report of the General Committee on Christian Education is not printed in the Journal. It is impossible to obtain. without great difficulty, the statistics which they must have gathered of the progress made and the opportunities afforded for the education of our children." It is imperfect enough today. The higher, the highest education of womanin Christian schools is fairly well provided for. There are no better schools for girls in the country, or in the world, than the Church schools established and carried on in many of our Dioceses. And the great Church schools for boys, not so many as the girls' schools -like Concord, Racine, Sing Sing, and Manlius-are the very best in the land. And this is true, too, and growing truer, every day of our Church Colleges. But the great lack is in the feeders. The natural drift from secular schools, public as well as private, is to the secular college; -and the great need of this Church is for parochial schools, good as the best, and able to compete in all profane learning with the magnificent establishments supported by taxation; and adding to this the crowning and completing advantage of definite religious truth; sanctiyfing "all secular knowledge by the transcendent power of the Faith, and accompanying it at every stage with that careful Christian training in the Church which if one receives as a child, when he is old he will not depart from it." This may seem to be a dreary picture of the present. But if this be so, go back to the year 1832, when St. James, and Hobart, and Lehigh University and the Universty of the South were not. When Sing-Sing was a military school of good repute; when Muhlenberg had not begun his great work; when James De Koven's bright star had not come above the horizon when Shattuck had the new Sacrifice, and of the sufficiency of Euyet consecrated the Concord homenot stead, and before the founding of St. Mary's Hall. Columbia and the Philadelphia Academy, and Washington, now Trinity College, and the Episcopal High School of the Diocese of Virginia, and Kenyon, and the New York Protestant Episcopal Public School, represented the educational work of the Church, some of them feeble in their infancy. Thank God to-day there is hardly a diocese without its high school for boys and girls, and we have learned the lesson that the best pioneer work with Mormons or among the heathen, for the Negroes or the Indians, in old and new dioceses alike, at home and abroad, is first the Episcopate and next the Church School gowing out of it.

MISSIONS.

The year of grace 1835 was the year in which this Church arose in energetic earnest to recognize her duty to the great continent of America, and to the great field which is the world.

Robertson had gone to Greece in 1829. Efforts had been made and had failed that same year to send missionaries to Liberia and South America, and a single missionary to the Indians was in charge of the Oneida Mission on the Fox River in Green Bay. Besides these there were two missionaries in Michigan, two in Tennessee, three in Florida, one in Alabama, and one in Missouri; and the moneys given to general missions in the year were about $7,000. In 1835 the Board of Directors of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society appointed a committee to consider the organization of the Society of its principles. Its essence, unchanged now except to make it more permanent by recent legislation, is, in Dr. Milner's words, that the Church is the Missionary Society, and should carry on the work of Missions by a Board appointed by the General Convention." The first result of this was the election and consecration of the first two missionary Bishops of the Church; and so one may say that out of this actions ame not only that great and glorious missionary Jackson Kemper, but the long line of of his successors treading, haud impari passu, in his saintly steps; and out of it flowed also results whose earthly and material statistics startle us with the evidence of the Divine blessing on the work, while their unknown spiritual issues are immeasurable and unimaginable till in numbers and in wealth—that the Domestic Committee have had $277,000 this year, and the Foreign Committee about $174,000, and that in thirteen missionary jurisdictions and thirty dioceses in our own land, thirteen bishops and four hundred missionaries are at work, while abroad, not counting Mexico and Haiti, there are three bishops and twenty-nine missionaries. "Laus Deo," as old Bishop Talbot wrote from Burlington, N. J., a century ago, " Laus Deo apud Americanos." But let it be LAUS DEO. The stone to be set up here is the stone Ebenezer, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." What ought not the next fifty years to see, with such an impetus, by the mere force of accumulation, and as the evidence of the Church's claim upon Worship.

Written for the Living Church. The indications of the history of the Apostolic Church go to show that, while they sustained their own exceptional and yet unestablished form of worship, the Apostles and their disciples continued, in addition, to observe the older Faith, - those of the Holy Trinity and of the In- tide-marks of that advancing wave whose waters and yet unabrogated worship of both the Temple and the synagogue. They taught daily in the Temple (Acts v., 42). But had they contemued the Temple Service, would they have been tolerated within its precincts? The decisive charge against St. Stephen, of having assailed the Mosaic institutions, had to be pressed by means of false witnesses (Acts vi., 11). Had the disciples enstranged themselves noticeably from the Jewish worship, such a resort for evidence would have been unnecessary. They did not urge anything against those institutions or that worship in their public addresses (Acts x., 40-43). On the contrary, while pleading for Christianity, they do it as a something additional and of saving benefit to great deal of useless labor besides being decidthe old system; they speak of the old with a sort of pride; some were even disposed to go too far in maintaining it (Acts xv., 1); and even in the Apostolic College, there was much doubt as or linen for woollen is carried out. Very pretty to taking an antagonistic position (Acts xv., 6-7); and the decision of the Council (Acts xv., 19-21) was such as to disturb no Jewish Christian in his observance of the old with the new. Verse 21st is tantamount to saying—as for you who are Jews, you will find the synagogue worship sustained in every city, so that you can avail yourselves of it, without carrying its peculiar regulations into your Christian assemblies of Gentile worshippers. Finally, St. Paul habitually attended the synagogue worship (Acts xiii., 14-18, at Antioch; xiv., 8, at Iconium; xviii., 4, at Corinth; xix., 8, at Ephesus) and also participated in the Temple Services when he had opportunity (Acts xxi, 26), It is not true, as many suppose, ing to them, put into a soup-kettle with two that he went to the synagogue only to dispute quarts of water, a tablespoonful of salt, a pod of with the Jews about Christ, and wholly apart from their worship. He took part in their worship; exhorted only at the proper moment in the Service (Acts xiii., 15-16); and then evidently as a part of the Service. Had he pursued a comtrary course, repudiating the older worship, how long would he have found Jewish listeners? The truth is, there was as yet no necessary an-tagonism between the old worship and the new. The bloody sacrifice had of course become superfluous; but God had not yet formally removed it. It was necessary for His people first to be educated into the comprehension of the virtue of charistic worship. It was necessary either for amicably sustained together. It was necessary as a practical demonstration of the substantial New. It was characteristic of the Divine Method. God moves slowly and while evolving the new from the old, weaves the old into the new.

Hence with an understanding of Divine Wisdom and a reverence for it, the Apostles appear greater or less attendance on the Jewish Services, until the seal of authoritative suspension had been set upon their highest form, in the taking away of the daily sacrifice, and in the overthrow of the Jewish polity in the destruction of Jerusalem. When God forsook, His servants withdrew. In later times, men forsook, and then looked for God to withdraw. The older mode is presumably the better.

A man was carrying a coon he had caught when he met three little boys in the road. All of them said, excitedly: "Mister, give me that coon, give me that coon, give me that coon, Mister!" "Well, boys, I'll tell you what I will do. If you will tell me the party you belong to and why, I'll give it to the boy who gives the best reason for his faith." "I'm a Republican, because that party saved the Union," said one. "I'm a Greenbacker, because that party is in favor of plenty of money." When the time of the the apprentice is to learn housekeeping. As soon third boy came, he said: "I'm a Democrat, 'case I want the coon."

Tracheotomy was performed, and the silver tube which was introduced at the time of the operation, and kept stationary by means of a circular pad, now serves the musician of Neuilly as a natural aperture through which he breathes, and so successfully that his flageolet playing was enthusiastically applauded by all present.—British Medical Journal.

The Household.

Do not put soap in the water with which you wash the glass on your bureau; wash it with clear water with a soft cloth; then polish it with a piece of chamois-skin. This removes lint and makes the glass shine. Soft paper will answer very well in the place of the chamois-skin.

RESUSCITATING FROZEN BODIES .- Careful experiments have been made upon dogs, with the following results: Of twenty animals treated by the method of gradual resuscitation in a cold room, fourteen perished; of twenty placed in a warm room, eight died; while of twenty immediately put into a hot bath, all recovered.

PERSIAN PATCHWORK.—Old fashioned patchwork in which our grandmother's delighted is the subject of a new departure. This novel patchwork is made by cutting foundation squares of muslin, all the same size, and arranging upon them odds and ends of silk or ribbon, plush or velvet, in any way the maker pleases, basting them in position, and then joining them together with feather stitch in gold colored filoselle. The squares when completed are joined together in the same way, and the result is a harmonious confusion of colors which has quite an eastern

Do make the children's garemnts a little plainer. Do not put so many stitches in your own clothes. Of what avail is it that you wear embroidered linen, tucked petticoats, ruffled skirts, while all the elasticity and bnoyancy of your nature are drilled out of you? Better be fresh and bright and cheery at heart in the plainest, homeliest garb than to be elegantly clad and lack spirits. Of what advantage is it to your children that they are the smartest dressed boys and girls in the neighborhood, if the last drop of their mother's life-blood is stitched into

So far as it is possible it is a good plan to discard all woollen table spreads, and lambrequins from the sleeping rooms, particularly in winter; they catch the dust, and retain it, and cause a edly unwholesome. With the many beautiful fabrics now to be obtained, in linen and cotton, there is no need of a room having a chilly and cheerless look if this suggestion of using cotton table covers are made of drab linen, or creamcolored; they may be ornamented by etchings in the corners, or may have a border all the way round, or pretty designs are worked in scarlet, in outline stitch, which will brighten the cover sufficiently. The mantel lambrequins should match, and the small amount of care required to keep them free from dust will be appreciated by the occupant of the room, particularly if she does her own work.

TURKEY BONE SOUP .- After a roasted turkey has been served a portion of the meat still adheres to the bones, especially about the neck; "drum-sticks" are left, or parts of the wings and picces rarely called for at the table. If there is three-fourths of a cupful or more left, cut off carefully and reserve for force-meat balls. Break the bones apart, and, with stuffing still adherered pepper broken into pieces, three or four blades of celery cut into half-inch pieces, two onions, three medium-sized potatoes, all sliced. Let it boil slowly but constantly until about half an hour before dinner (five or six hours). Lift out bones, skim off fat, strain through a colander, return to soup kettle. Prepare the forcemeat balls by chopping the scraps of turkey very fine; take half a teaspoonful of cracker-crumbs smoothly rolled, a little salt, pepper, and a half teaspoonful of powdered summer savory or thyme; mix these together and add a raw beaten egg to bind them. Roll mixture into balls about the size of a hickory nut and drop into the soup ten minutes before serving. Have ready in the tureen a large tablespoonful of parsley cut very fine. Pour in soup and send to the table hot.

Gifts made to the baby, who is yet too young appreciate tokens of affectionate regard the salvation of the Jews, or their full trial, that of course welcomed by the mother. The daintiest socks to have decorously and devoutly maintained a now made are of silk, knit just as the little worsted ones are; they are not so serviceable for cold weather as the worsted ones, but to adorn a baby-basket no prettier object can be devised: a little very soft cotton should be stuffed in them. so that they will stand upright, but do not let it show at the top, or above where the tassels are tied. A lovely blanket is made of soft white flannel, with a narrow hem, to which is sewed an edge knit out of split zephyr. In each corner of the blanket some figure is embroidered in the delicate outline stitch; it is a pretty fancy, in two corners, in soft blue silk, to work figures of the Kate Greenaway style, and in the other two to put sprays of flowers. Make use of one color only in the embroidery and trimming of the GOOD SERVANTS .-- It is suggested that as good servants are undoubtedly scarce, capable housewives should take apprentices, and teach them the routine of household labor. A better state of things would soon be instituted and both the ladies and the girls would be much better off in the end. A lady taking an apprentice must be one thoroughly qualified and competent to give instruction, and with the understanding that as taught she is to be paid for her work. If the girl is interested and apt she will soon be able to earn something while learning, which is an inducement to do the very best she can possibly. For a girl to receive the most profit for her time she had better go into a comfortably well-to-do family where the lady looks personally after the household affairs; for in our wealthy families, society demands so much time from the ladies. that they can afford to pay more and not be compelled to look after the cares of the house, Such places are good after the apprentice has become skilful in her work. Skilled workmen inform themselves so as to work to better advantage, and do more and better work. And working in such ways is just the difference between skilled and unskilled labor. This difference is perceptible in little things specially pertaining to housework. A certain amount of intelligence and skill is required even in sweeping a floor. In all kinds of housework, house arranging and house planning, the more skilled labor we can employ, the better and more economically is our work done. How are we to succeed in securing this kind of work people? By adopting the ap prentice plan and educating our young girls to it.

A CHRISTMAS SONG.

Written for the Living Church. Bright hosts of angels hover Above Judea's plain, Praising our God, and singing This rapt, exultant strain: "In Bethlehem of Judah, Is born to you this day, A Saviour, Christ the mighty. Who all the earth shall sway. A babe He in the manger lies. This sovereign Lord of all the skies." The shepherds see the countless throng

With heavenly glory bright, And list the song that floats along The hushed entranced midnight: 'Glory to God, to men good-will, All hail the Day-star's dawn, Let human cares and grief be still, The Lord of life is born!

Rejoice, ye shepherd watchers, Hasten your Lord to greet, And gifts of myrrh and incense Lay at this Saviour's feet! A beauteous star new-risen. A Christmas Sketch.

It was a cold, bright, crisp Christmas-Eve, everything seemed to say that. The streets of the big city were full of bustling men, women and children, all hurrying along with their arms full of mysterious bundles and packages, and with such jolly good natured faces which seemed to say, "Merry Christmas, merry Christmas." There were to begin with, the dear little rosy children looking so full of importance as they ran along beside some good papa, mamma or aunty, very busy in making their last little purchases, which were to be such very great surprises to every one. Then there were the papas and mammas and aunties themselves, going first into one great store and then into another, picking up here and there something for each of the loved ones at home. We must not forget the grandmothers either, indeed not; for what won't grandmothers do for the little ones at Christmas time. So away flew the dear old ladies homeward, quite tired out with their unusual exertions, but with the seats of the sleigh loaded with parcels, and looking as happy as possible. It was beginning to grow quite dark and the crowded thoroughfares were commencing to thin a little. The street lamps were lit and one by one the stars peeped out, twinkling away brighter than ever for Christmas Eve, and seeming place where, despite Commissions and re- to keep time to the merry jingle of the forms many old customs survive, is the sleigh bells, that rang out on the clear celebration of Christmas Eve in the Col- night air. ches above the writing table. To enable him to accomplish this, I have put up for him a rat-ladder, built somewhat on the lines of a salmon ladder. After I had shown him once or twice how to get up this ladder, he very soon learned what he had to do. I have known him to scramble up this ladder with objects, which for a rat must be of considerable weight. One day I saw him steal a whole red herring. Having tried the best way to carry it, he ultimately picked it up at the right point where it balanced. When he arrived at the round hole which leads to the sleeping compartment of the squirrel's cage, he was pulled up short by the herring, which was crossways in his mouth. I was curious to see what he would do. He dropped the herring and seemed to consider. Having quickly made up his mind he adopted the following plan. Leaving the herring outside he went into the hole, and turning short around seized it by the head, and hauled it in with the greatest ease. The muscles about the neck of the rat are very strong, giving him great power to use his wedge-shaped head, whether for boring or carrying. He uses his tail to steer himself, and when climbing, works it as a rope-dancer works his balancing-pole.

The rat is a great stealer of bits of paper, and any loose pieces he can find he carries away. When the post comes in, in the morning, therefore, the rat has the envelopes as a perquisite. These he tears into little bits and makes a very comfortable nest with them. -Buckland's Jottings from Animal Life.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S BARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulor diseases.

"Some months ago' I was troubled with scrofalous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurfand dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

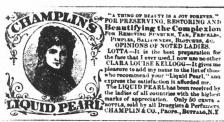

J.W. Bowen, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "After's HAIR Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm Street, Charleston, Mass., April 13, 1859, says: "Two years ago, about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using Ayer's HAIR Vigor the falling stopped, and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used one bottle of the Vigor, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials of the efficacy of Ayer's HAIR Vigor. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Feast of the Circumcision.

The Catholic Church does not observe the first day of January because it is the beginning of the Civil Year, but because it is the Octave of Christmas; that is, the eighth day from the Feast of the Nativity of our Blessed Lord. This will appear the more evident, when we are made aware that, whereas its anniversary has been one of the Church's Festivals from the very earliest ages, it is not much more than a hundred years since New Year's Day fellnot on the first of January, but-on March 25th. Its observance as the Octave of the Feast is-as we have stated-of great antiquity; but, for more than twelve hundred years, it has also been turned to account as the Memorial-Day of the Circumcision of our Blessed Lord, which as we all know took place (according to the provisions of the Mosaic law) on the eighth day from the birth of the Holy Child. Blunt says that "from its coincidence with the Kalends of January, on which the riotous and immoral festival of the Saturnalia was kept by the Romans, it offered a great difficulty to the Church for some centuries; and there were places and periods, in which the Saturnalia were so mixed up with the Christian Feast, that the observance of the latter was altogether forbidden.

The great practical lesson of the day is well set forth in the Proper Collect; viz. the duty of following the example of the Blessed Son of God, by obedience to His revealed Will, in all things, and especially in the mortification of our hearts and members from all worldly and carnal lusts.

> The year begins with Thee, And Thou beginn'st with woe, To let the world of sinners see That blood for sin must flow. Thine infant cries, O Lord!

Thy tears upon the breast Are not enough; the legal sword Must do its stern behest.

A foretaste of cent, unchristian, atheistical." Heaven it has been, in which earth's jarring discords were for the time forgotten

"No war nor battle sound Is heard the world around. '

Blessed calm, upon the heaving ocean of human toil and strife! The echoes of the angels' song still linger in our ears, and the peaceful star of Bethlehem still shines upon our way as we go forth once more to meet the issues of this present world. That star stands ever above the manger cradle. Clouds may at times obscure it, and amid the dangers and difficulties of our way we may sometimes be forced to turn our eyes to the ground lest we stumble amid the stones and ruins that encumber our path.

In our highest exaltation of rejoicing we may not forget that the shadow of the Cross is resting on the cradle. Even to the mother, highly favored, it was said, "A sword shall pierce through thy own soul also." The angels of the Nativity were, indeed, harbingers of peace, but it is a "peace by power." We are not permitted to enter at once and without suffering, upon the rest that remaineth to the people of God. The pole-star of our peace shines ever and stands over Bethlehem to bled: lead us to the Incarnate Lord, but we must follow it by toilsome patience, bearing our gifts of gold, frankincense and don our sins, through Christ our Lord. AMEN. myrrh.

In full accord with this truth is the ap- sake. AMEN. pointment of St. Stephen's anniversary so near to the Nativity. "Yesterday Christ was born on earth that to-day Stephen might be born in heaven."

> Christum natum, Qui beatum Coronavit Stephanum, Venite adoremus.

And because Christ was born yesterday, Stephen suffers martyrdom to-day, teaching us that Christmas rejoicing must soon be overclouded by the presence and power of evil in this world, and that only through conflict and death may we enter upon its abiding and undisturbed posses-

Still, even in this solemn fact we have cheer and comfort for times of trial. St. Stephen suffered martyrdom, but in it he was gloriously sustained. Clouds might obscure but could not shut out the heavenly vision. His extreme hour of earthly trial was his most radiant hour of earthly existence. His face was "as the face of an angel." The agonies of a cruel death were swallowed up in the vision of the indescribable glory that dawned at Bethlehem. So may it be with all who have rejoiced that Christ was born at Bethlehem, and have gone forth to conflict and suffer-

Thus the four days of the Christmas fes tival are an epitome of the Gospel as realized in life. The Incarnation was the bringing in of a new life to a dying world, a life that was to be gained by suffering and death. The heavenly choir sang of peace, but it was a peace that was to be attained by conflict, growing brighter and more complete as the conflict became more intense. In the attainment of this peace of which the angels sang, we must seek to Grace at Meals.

"Blessing the table," says Collier, in his Sacred Interpreter, "or saying grace, on our food, and thanksgiving afterwards, on the Lord's Day or not at all. is a necessary and Christian-like practice, encouraged by St. Paul, who has taught us that 'every creature of God is good, if it be received with thanksgiving. '" Our Lord, when about to feed the multitude, took the loaves and fishes and "looking up to Heaven, He blessed them. " The custom of saying grace at meals prevailed among the Jews, and has always been praceverywhere resounded with the praise of even looking up to Heaven for a blessing, Him of Whom the whole family in Heav- or returning thanks for them, is most inde-

The head of the house is, of course, the proper person to do this, and even a Bishop, if present, would not assume the office unless invited to do so. But the duty may be delegated to any member of the household, and it is sometimes performed by a child. Nothing could be more beautiful and appropriate than a short invocation of God's blessing upon the repast, by a little child. The influence of such an act of faith upon every member of the family must extend over the whole day. We subjoin some forms in common use, giving the preference to the responsive grace on occasions when the whole family are assem-

With party politics the LIVING CHURCH of course has nothing to do, but it has an interest in the public welfare and may rightly exert its influence for what it believes to be the public good. The conwhich it is proposed to give the President the power to veto parts of an appropriation bill without vetoing the whole, seems to be in the interest of the people and calculated to prevent the "jobbery" which the present law makes easy. Such a provision now exists in the Constitution of New York and in thirteen other States, and has been found to work well. The President in his message recommended it. Of course it will be opposed by professional politicians, as it threatens one of their strong-holds and lessens their power. But this is just what patriotic citizens want to

News and Notes.

The compiler of "News and Notes" is at a serious loss this week. All his foreign papersand, alas! his Christmas letters from homehave been burnt up. It seems incredible that the postal authorities should allow stoves in the mail cars and yet such is the case, and so, last week, two very large foreign mails, which had unfortunately arrived in New York on the same day, were entirely destroyed. What a loss to the many thousands who were eagerly waiting for news from home—news always more anxiously watched for at this holy, happy season.

The third volume of Bishop Wilberforce's Memoirs has just been published in England, and is exciting great interest and attention. The Primacy of all England has been accepted by Dr. Benson, Bishop of Truro, an admirable Churchman, to whom, after the Bishop of Winchester's refusal, Mr. Gladstone offered it. He went to Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he successively became Scholar and Fellow, and was for some years an Assistant Master at Rugby, and was Head Master of Wellington College, from its opening in 1858 down to 1872, when he was appointed a Canon Residentiary and Chancellor of Lincoln Cathedral, having been a Prebendary of that Cathedral for three years previously. He was for several years Examing Chaplain to the Bishop of Lincoln, and in December, 1876, was appointed, on Lord Beaconfield's recommendation, to the newly founded See of Truro, to which he was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral in the following April. Dr. Benson has published several volumes of sermons and is one of the contributors to the "Speaker's Commentary on the Bible." He married in 1859 the daughter of the late William Sedgwick, of Skipton, Yorkshire.

At the request of the late Primate, on his death-bed, the Rev. A. H. It is understood that Mr. Mackonochie will be appointed to the latter parish. The correspondence between the dying Archbishop and the hard-working, sincere Ritualist is most touching and does equal honor to both. In his first letter Dr. Tait said:

I am exceedingly anxious that the result of the Royal Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts should, by the blessing of Almighty God, be such as to allay disquiet, and, by meeting any reasonable objections to existing procedure, to Cardinal Donnet, Archbishop of Bordeaux, set men's minds free for the pressing duties died last week. I venture, therefore, privately to write to you—though I cannot yet do so with my own hand-to invite you seriously to consider whether you can in any way contribute to minimize the present feeling of bitterness which undoubtedly exists in some quarters.

I need not assure you that I do not wish in any way to dictate to you a course of action; but if you feel it possible, consistently with duty, to withdraw voluntarily, by resignation of your benefice, from further conflict with the Courts, I am quite sure you would be acting in the manner best calculated to promote the real power and usefulness of the Church to which we belong I make this appeal to you under a strong sense of responsibility.

In his final letter Mr. Mackonochie said:

The conclusion at which I have arrived is toacquiesce in your Grace's wish that I should resign my benefice. You will understand that it is to myself, and will be to my people, a great sorrow, but one which I hope we shall be willing to bear, if the true peace and liberty of the Church can be obtained by my compliance.

My life, hitherto, since my ordination, has had for its supreme object the seeking those gifts for the Church, and I am content, if so it be, to give up my peace for hers.

Your Grace will I am sure, understand that I cannot in this matter act otherwise than with that obedience to my conscience to which you refer me, so that you will not think that I have changed my conviction as to the State Courts. I accept the line of action which your Grace has indicated, simply in deference to you as supreme representative of our Lord Christ in all things spiritual in this land, and not as withdrawing arything which I have said or done in regard to those Courts. This I cannot agree to in any way whatever. No one can deny that the bitterness which your Grace would abate is altogether an exceptional circumstance, giving rise to exceptional remedies to avert, if it may be, by the goodness of God, ruin from His Church, and leaving her free for the future discharge of her great mission, at home and in foreign lands.

At the meeting at Lord Salisbury's to inaugurate a movement for a memorial for Dr. Pusey. Dr. Woodford, Bishop of Ely, used the following words:

I wish to put on record my own conviction of the thankfulness which we, as members of the Earl of Derby's father hated Mr. Disraeli, the Church, owe to God Almighty for having raised up this great doctor to live and to labor for fifty years amongst us; and still further, I wish to put on record my own conviction of the vast raeli as an "adventurer" and a charlatan; how good done by the great movement which has Mr. John Walter boasted of the circulation of been associated with his name—(cheers)—a movement which so thoroughly carried out the purpose of his life, that of recalling to the mind On Friday, the 8th inst, in a village church-of the Church forgotten truths embodied genera-yard, without even a brick between him and

The Living Church Annual.

[The following letter has been sent by the writer to the Episcopal Register.]

MESSES EDITORS:—As I have been personally named in your columns as one who has endeavored to "Romanize" the Church for financial considerations, I trust you will give me space to correct a misapprehension on the part of some of your correspondents. Allow me to say, first, that while I cannot claim credit for much that is good in the Living Church Annual, the work having been done so largely by others, I am editorially responsible for all. It is true, "the inspiration of the whole tract was from Illinois" as both editors reside in Illinois, except the editors, "inspired" the annual, it is false.

As to the line of Apostolic Succession, given in the Annual, about which complaint is so loudly made in your columns, I have only to say that it is the one generally received and quoted in the Anglican Church, and not one at all of our own devising. If we had gotten it up in the interest of a party or to sustain some theory of the Church, there might be some sense in the suspicion that has been expressed. We took their from the official Year Book of the Church in Scotland, little dreaming that "agerms of Romanism" would be suspected.

I do not consider it necessary to defend myself from the insinuation of your correspondent. "Chicago," that I would betray the Church for money. I am only surprised that you could publish such a thing. C. W. LEFFINGWELL.

Harper's Weekly for Christmas has a touching and beautiful poem by Margaret Eytinge, illustrated by Fred Dillman. It describes a poor interested of the fundamental party of the continue to receive were compelled, for want of funda, reluctantly to refuse for the past year and the monthly surprised that you could publish such a thing.

and beautiful poem by Margaret Eytinge, illustrated by Fred Dillman. It describes a poor woman wandering in the storm through the city at night, carrying her half-clad babe. As she is gazing into the window of a palatial residence a pretty child comes out, calls her in, and ministers to her and the suffering infant. It is beautifully told, and one can hardly read it without desiring to do something for the poor. The last verse is as follows:

"And watching angels saw, I ween, As they looked down upon this earth, No scene more fit to grace the time Made sacred by the Saviour's birth;

A child saved by a child from death, Or worse than death, O! happy sight For sake of Him, the Child Divine, Who came to us on Christmas night.

Personal Mention.

By the mistake of a proof-reader the wrong initials and the wrong address were given in our Annual to an esteemed clergyman of the Diocese of Michigan. His many priends will not need to be told that we should have said Rev. W. Herbert Smythe, Port Austin, Mich.

Resolved: That bowing in resignation to the will of God, we recognize in this sad bereavement a loss to this community of a citizen faithful in every relation in life, and in an unusual degree, respected and honored by every one that knew him, and a loss to this parish of a Communicant and Church Warden who for years had lived in our midst a most godly, consistent and saintly life.

Resolved: That the Secretary of the Vestry enter these resolutions in the official records of the Parish and transmit a copy thereof to the afflicted family of our deceased brother, assuring them of our tender sympathy and that giving God hearty thanks for the good example of this His servant, we will ever hold in grateful remembrance his devout life, ready self-sacrificing and loving zeal for Christ and His Church.

INGERSOLISM: From a Secular Point of View. A Lecture by George R. Wendling. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price, $100.

Mr. Wendling is deservedly honored all over the land for his maniy and masterly opposition on the platform to the man who lives on the ruin of what is most dear to humanity. The central thought of the lecture seems to be this, that from a secular point of view the logical outcome of Ingersolism is anarchy in business, in society, in government. It is the removal of the key-stone of the arch of civilization, which would involve the crash of the world and whelm humanity in ruin. In arguing this, and setting forth the world-conquest of Christ, Mr. Wendting speaks with great power. It would have been better, as it may seem to some, if he had given less effort to answer the cavils of the infidel by adducing proof from the field of "evidences," and had treated his opponent and his theories with something of the sarcasm that they deserve. Ingersoll hesitates not to ridicule our holiest things, and to treat with contempt and derision the dearest treasures of men. Some master of epigram and ridicule ought to arise and give him as good as he sends. That is the only argument which men of that stamp fear. Let their own weapons be turned upon them and their influence on the masses will be broken. This lecture was not, of course, intended to castigate Mr. Ingersoll, but to guard the people against his principles or lack of principles. It has been delivered in over six hundred of the principal lecture courses of America, with universal acceptance and admiration.

GESTA CHRISTI; or a History of Human Progress under Christianity. By Charles Loring Brace. New York: A. C. Armstrong & Son, 714 Broadway. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price, $2.50.

One of the most extraordinary claims of modern infidelity is that the world has improved in spite of Christianity rather than because of it; that mechanical inventions, secular education. and attention to sanitary laws, are the basis of the world's social and political progress. This order. amazing assumption is loudly proclaimed, and Jewish A'D Christian History. Boston: perhaps not a few are troubled to answer it. The book described above is just to the point. Its author writes from a large experience in the work of diminishing poverty, crime and misery, in the application of Christian principles, and has made a thorough study of Roman customs and laws. He shows that the Gospel has been the great reforming power of the world, and traces its influence in the emancipation of slaves. and the elevation of woman, and the amelioration of the hard lot of the unfortunate, and the extirpation of the most degrading vices. The work is well done and well sustained by references. The author's idea of the Church is exceedingly misty. He claims that the Church was an afterthought, so to speak; and that it was the influence of certain great ideas, independent of any organization, which reformed the world. Yet we read that on the day of Pentecost many were "added to the Church!

HISTORY OF ANCIENT ART. By Dr. Franz von Reber. Translated and augmented by Joseph Thatcher Clark. With 310 Illustrations and a Glossary of Technical Terms. New York: Harper & Bros; Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. Price $3.50.

There is probably no compound of Art History in any language so convenient and trustworthy as this. The book so admirably begun by Winklemann more than a hundred years ago is here developed with a fulness and accuracy that leaves little to be criticised. The exquisite copper-plate outlines given in Lodge's translation of Winklemann are wanting, of course, in the work before us, as the wood cut is better adapted to the great variety of representation that is attempted, and much more economical. The illustrations on the whole are satisfactory. The work begins with the oldest monuments in the world, and from the pyramids and tombs of Egypt traces the styles and progress of art in Chaldea, Babylonia, Assyria, and Asia Minor. The richest portion is of course, the division that treats of art among the Greeks. The history closes with the Roman art of the time of the Coliseum.

MY PORTFOLIO. A Collection of Essays, by Austin Phelps, D. D., late Professor in Andover Theological Seminary, Author of "Men and Books," and "The Theory of Preaching." New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. 1882: Cloth, 12mo, pp. 280. Price $1.50.

Professor Phelps has a bright, clear, chatty way of writing, and his books read easily, and well repay for the reading. In the present volume he has republished in permanent form a number of papers on a number of subjects which have already seen light in the "Congregationalist," "Independent," "Christian Union,' and "Sunday School Times." The first three essays, under the title "A Pastor of the Last Generation," are descriptive of the ministry of Presiding Bishop, with an account of his semihis father. Then follow two essays on "The Rights of Believers in Ancient Creeds," which are limited, however, to past reformation, theological systems, and formulas, and have no relation to the genuine "Ancient Creeds" of the Holy Catholic Church. Other papers are mostly on practical themes for general readers: the "Puritan Theory of Amusements," and the "Christian Theory of Amusements" compared; "Is Card Playing a Christian Amusement?" "The Question of Sunday Cars," "Woman Suffrage as judged by the Working of Negro Suffrage;" "The Length of Sermons," Theology of the Marble Fawn;" "What do we know of the because it has rather left off him. They are vain Heavenly Life?" Few collections of occasional articles from the periodical press, are better strength, and passeth through trials without worth preservation.

HYMNAL. According to the use of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. With Appropriate Tunes. Edited by the Rev. Charles H. Hall, D. D., Rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, N. Y., and S. B. Whiteley, organist of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, N. Y. With the Sanction of the Rt. Rev. A. N. Littlejohn, D. D., Bishop of Long Island. New York and Chicago: A. S. Barnes & Co. Cloth, 12mo, pp. 437, Price $1.10.

Dr. Hall's Hymnal with Tunes, is a very excelent one, and has been some time before the Church. Mr. Whiteley, his co-editor, has long been recognized as one of our best practical musicians. The best and most popular tunes are largely to be found in the book, though some of the more recent favorites are not given.

COUNT ERBACH. A Story of the Reformation. Translated from the German of Armin Stein. By James T. Helm, D. D. New York: Anson D. F. Randolph & Co. Cloth, 12mo, pp. 258.

A pretty and romantic story of the German reformation. It is written with a strong Lutheran bias, and must be regarded as a more successful religious fiction, than as a historical picture. This is no doubt as the author intended. The glimpse it gives of the period is, however, a very fascinating one.

A very charming little poem and a very charming little book; exquisitely illustrated. The type is quaint and old-fashioned, but very legible. The author has quite a reputation in Chicago as a singer; he has now proved himself a poet.

The narrative is given as far as possible in Bible language. The first volume contains an introductory sketch from Malheimer's Ancient History, and an appendix of valuable notes on Old Testament subjects. The other volumes also contain similar notes. Mr. James Pott, Publisher, has commenced to issue a series of instruction books for Sundayschools, by the Rev. Walker Gwynne, edited by the Bishop of Albany. The lessons are in three grades, junior, middle, and senior, are adapted to the Christian Year, and give prominence to the teaching of the Catechism. The series promises to be very good and attractive. The giving of all the answers to questions is not calculated to incite the pupil to exertion, nor to compel him to use his Bible. We should much prefer to have only references given where these can be found to answer the question. We have known youth who could not find a book of the bible after years at Sunday-school.

THE LIVE OAK BOYS, by Elijah Kellogg, is intended to show that boys of energy and spirit are often misunderstood and mismanaged. If all that is told of Richard Constable's youth is to be believed, it is no wonder that he was a naughty boy. His roaming life is told in a pleasing way and some pictures illustrate the narrative. Published by Lee & Shepard, Boston.

AROUND THE HOUSE is another dainty picture book with descriptions in verse, very charming to children old snd young. The Rhymes are by Edward Willett, the Illustrations by Charles Kendrick. Published by R. Worthington, New York. Handsomely illuminated cover.

The January issue of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine contains a sketch and portrait of our centennial. This number has an abundance of good holiday reading and illustrations.

Letters to the Editor.

Systematic Offerings.

To the Editor of the Living Church: Reading the statistical detail and footings of the "offerings column" of the last number of the Spirit of Missions, one cannot help feeling both glad and sorry-glad, for the unusually large amount given for general missionary purposes during the past year, and sorry for the comparatively small number of parishes giving it.

Now, the question one naturally asks is: Why should not all, or at least nearly all, of our parishes have contributed something to an object so well deserving the missionary spirit of our American Church? Surely all must be interested in seeing and helping the good work go on. The answer then, cannot be, "want of interest." In my opinion, in the majority of the delinquent cases, it is rather, 1st, the feeling on the part of poor parishes, that they need all their revenues for self-support; and, 2d, want of system in asking the offerings of the congregation. Am I not right? If so, then in attempting the suggestion of a practical remedy of the fault, may I not say further that, in the very nature of things, such remedy must lie almost wholly within the power of the priest in charge? I think so; for, as meeting the first cause, or that of the "poverty plea," if a priest really possess the faith he professes, he will contend that his parish is no loser, but rather the gainer, when it has given at least one tenth of its income to work outside its own boundaries. Then, further, as carrying his faith and consequent teaching into practice, he can without opposition, except in most extraordinary cases, "hand the alms basons to his wardens" for all legitimate church objects when presented at reasonable intervals.

But I cannot believe that it is " want of faith,' which, as a cause of the delinquency mentioned, affects any considerable number of our self-sacrificing priests. Banish the thought! It is rather their "want of system." Priests are men, and most men have by nature very little of what we understand by "system" or "order."

In business, if they would be successful, they must cultivate system. And just so in the business of the priest; if any man needs system, he most of all; but he most of all, because of the character of his duties, is under temptation to content himself with desultory methods. Hence his prime need, if he be not a systematic man by nature, to use all the help possible for the establishment and maintenance of a system. And this particularly in the matter of obtaining offerings from his people for objects which, in their presumably lesser interest, they will not be likely to remind him of. What he wants for this is a system ordered in such a way that it will not be forgotten, or neglected, or made to give way to To the Editor of the Living Church: anything short of the direst necessity.

But how secure so desirable an end? I reply, very simply." By a trifling use of printer's ink, or by the pen in hand! The matter having been offerings for each Sunday and other "offering" days of the year. This done, and then the con-'monthly Sunday" offering for outside objects, and it seems to me the remedy is complete, or at very great change in condition." least so far complete that the priest will hardly be likely to fail of a duty to which some in his congregation must respond.

Now, in illustration of the above system, par don me, if, in this anonymous communication, I present my own schedule as a kind of model for the use of country parishes, with a total income of not less than nine hundred nor more than fifteen hundred dollars per annum. My congregation duly notified and occasionally reminded of what I call the "second Sunday offering," the placard hanging in the vestibule of the Church reads as follows:

S Church, J* Schedule of Offerings for the Diocesan Year ending May 1st, 1883. ending may 1st, 1003.

""August.............Foreign
"""Nov....Indian & Freedmen
""Feb......Am. Church Building Fund.

3d, 4th, 5th Sunday in each month....Parochial Ex.

The result of following the above schedule is, that more than one-tenth of our income finds its way to outside objects, nor is our parish one whit poorer, but rather the richer for it. Other parishes trying our plan will, I am sure, find it the same.

Poor Parishes.

To the Editor of the Living Church: Your correspondent can heartily appreciate the article in last issue of the LIVING CHURCH entitled Poor Parishes.

If the lives of many of our clergy out on the frontier were known, they would furnish a thrilling narrative of adventure, of toil and exposure. The impression exists among many that these men are rough, uncouth, uncultured; but, on the contrary, a great part have been educated in colleges and seminaries of the highest standard in the East. They have left home and friends, and all the advantages of a populous and cultured community, and have taken their lives in their hands, in order to plant the blood-red banner of the Son of God in the waste places of the earth. We make use of the term waste places not that the land is lacking in fertility, for it only needs the hand of industry to develope a marvellous abundance, but the country is sparsely settled and the people are in great part ignorant of the doctrines and usages of the Church and have no conscientious convictions regarding the Church.

However, noble work, accompanied with untold hardship, is being accomplished for the Church away off here among the "Rockies." Yet, how often does the cry from Macedonia for help fall upon the listless ear of our eastern churches many of them rolling in luxury and wealth and with a surplus fund, with which each individually could, if they would, help to support a mission in the far west, and thus lighten the burden of those who are doing the hard work of the FRONTIER. Mr. Gwynne's Catechism.

To the Editor of the Living Church:

In regard to the stricture of the Rev. Mr. Olin upon the Catechism of Mr. Gwynne, I would say that I can see nothing incorrect in the definition referred to by him.

At the same time, lest the matter should be passed by unheeded, I write this letter, that I may learn what is the objection.

I am about to introduce the Manuals into my Sunday-school, and I wish to teach nothing to the children committed to my care but Catholic

I have seen nothing but the advance sheets of the work; but I relied, when I decided to use it, upon the superior scholarship and churchmanship of the Bishop who edits it.

From all that I have studied in the New Testament upon Baptism, and in the comments of the accepted Doctors of the Church, I can glean nothing but what substantiates the definition of Mr. Gwynne.

It may be simply a new way of setting forth an old truth. Certainly we believe that in this world there are two Kingdoms, the Kingdom of Light, and the Kingdom of Darkness, and that Christians have been "translated" from the one to the St. Paul says that they who have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ; and if that is not receiving a new nature, I do not know what it is. The fact of a birth necessitates the fact of a consequent nature. Therefore, the fact of a new birth necessitates the fact of a consequent new nature.

As to that new nature, I would not go beyond the teaching of the Church, whose Catechism declares it to be a state of salvation. This is plainly set forth in a question and answer which follow in Mr. Gwynne's Manual:

"What nature and name did you receive at your baptism? I was 'born again' into the family of Jesus, the Second Adam, and received His name.' J. D. HERRON.

New Castle, Pa., Dec. 15, 1882.

It does not seem to me that the Reverend Walker Gwynne's question-in his "Manual of Christian Doctrine"— "Why should you receive a new name in Baptism?"-and its answer "Befirst explained to the congregation, the priest cause I then received a new nature" are open to can cause to be placed in the vestibule of the adverse criticism. Since I find in the xxvth the planting of the Church here in America. church, in plain sight of all who enter, a large sermon on the Baptismal Offices, by the Rev. ornamental placard detailing the objects of the John Keble-whose teachings very few, if any, will venture to call in question the following passage: "Now why should the child have a new gregation occasionally reminded of, say the name given him in Baptism?" Pusey and DeKoven

To the Editor of the Living Church: The discussion now to some extent engaging the public mind of the church, as to the views and practices of the late Dr. Pusey, recalls a state of facts which, if not generally known, will, I am sure, be of interest to your readers.

In the General Convention of 1871, Dr. De Koven in a celebrated speech on the Doctrine of the Real Presence, used the following formula: 'Who myself adore and teach the people to adore Christ present in the elements under the form of bread and wine."

Shortly before the time of the making of this speech, Sir Robert Phillimore, Judge of the Court of Arches in England, had decided the Sheppard-Bennett case, rendering a most learned, able and exhaustive opinion. In that case it appeared that Mr. Bennett had published work on the "Real Presence," in which inter alia, he had said: "Who myself adore, and teach the people to adore the consecrated elements, believing Christ to be in them." He had also spoken of "the real, actual and visible Presence of the Lord upon the Altars of our Churches."

It appeared, however, that in a later edition of his work, he had withdrawn those words and substituted others for them, for "the real, actual and visible Presence of our Lord upon the Altars of our Churches," he had substituted "the real, actual Presence of our Lord, under the form of bread and wine, upon the Altars of our Churches;" and for the words, "Who myself adore, and teach the people to adore the consecrated elements, believing Christ to be in them, he had substituted the formula afterwards used by Dr. De Koven, and above quoted.

In explanation Mr. Bennett said, in his later edition, that his meaning in the original passages had been precisely the same as that conveyed in the words substituted; and added, that the formula then (lastly) adopted was suggested to him by Dr. Pusey.

the formularies of the Church, Sir Robert Phillimore strongly condemned him for the use of the original expressions. But the Judge said: It is my duty to decide whether the words in which he now expresses himself, and which he jound theologian, occupying one of the highest positions in the University of Oxford, do or do not contravene the formularies of our Faith. If were to pronounce that they did so, I should be passing sentence, in my opinion, upon a long roll of illustrious divines, who have adorned our Universities and fought the good fight of our Church, from Ridley to Keble, from the divine whose martyrdom the Cross at Oxford commemprofesses to have since borrowed from a prorates, to the divine in whose honour that University has just founded her last College. Moreover, I could not pronounce such a sentence without disregarding judicial authority of the gravest Kind.

I do not understand, that Dr. Pusey ever discredited the statement connecting him with the substantial expressions, and, if I am right, surely their use will show the "unity of spirit" on this subject existing between him and our own great Apostle of Catholicity. They both lived to see the Holy Eucharist restored to somewhat of its Christly and Primitive importance. They both, though the one more clearly than the other, lived to see the special and invisible Presence within the light of which they passed so large a part of their holy lives, recognized by a large majority of the best minds of the Anglican Communion. And this most largely, the one is America and the other in England, through their own devoted work.

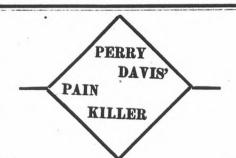

Upon them both so alike in many things. May light perpetual shine! J. A. H.

A Valuable Book. To the Editor of the Living Church ;

Let me through your widely circulated paper very pointedly call the attention of especially all Parish Priests, and superintendents of our Sunday Schools, to the admirable and much needed English Church History for American children, by Rev. R. W. Lowrie, just published by James Pott, No. 12 Astor Place, New York. This little book fills a most important place in a Sunday School Library for which I know none other; and indeed, it would be most instructive for many an adult, in a Parish Library. The style in which it is written is plain, sprightly and very pleasing. There is nothing dry about it, and so, as is but too apt to be the case, uninviting and distasteful to children. Indeed our good brother, the author, is a real success, as in some other productions, so especially in this effort of writing Church History so that children will read it with interest and avidity. It has been very nicely gotten up by the publisher, is of just the right size for children and is of moderate price. Several copies in every Sunday School Library would do a most excellent work in imparting correct information in the pleasantest manner, concerning the dear old Mother Church from which our own, the Protestant Episcopal or American Catholic Church, has its origin. Should this volume, bringing the History down the days of Archbishop Theodore, be appreciated, as it ought, then we may hope that the gifted author will be encouraged soon to give the Church a Second Volume and even several, to PARISH PRIEST.

Christmas-tide in Germany.

Written for the Living Church

The Germans have ever been enthusiastic lovers of the Christmes season, and their festivities in former times were not surpassed, if indeed they were equalled by the customs of Merrie Old England. The names by which this great festival has been called in Germany are numerous. Christfest, which is akin to our Christmas, Welch na dolig, which is but a version of the French Noel, and the appellation Weihnachten, meaning Holy Night. The term Juel, used in Mediæval times, is from the verb julen, signifying, to be merry, and strongly resembles the ancient Celtic word Yule. One other German name for Christmas, not so familiar as the others, is Anklopferstag. This title was derived from a very strange custom, now nearly, if not entirely, obsolete, of several persons going around the village and beating on the doors and shutters with large wooden mallets, this remarkable eccentricity being symbolical of the anxiety of the imprisoned spirits to be released from bondage by the birth of the Child King.

For many days before Christmas the shops and booths in Germany are filled with the Christbaume in all sizes, and in the windows are displayed toys of Levery description; Christmascandles of various colors, and silver and gilt ornaments with which to deck the trees. Few, if any families are so poor that it is impossible for them to obtain at least a sprig of pine or fir with which to ornament their houses. In North Germany one parlor is given to the children Christmas-Eve, and here they arrange the tree for their parents, hanging upon it the gifts, which, for weeks they have been either secretly making, or have purchased with their pocket money. When all is in readiness the children summon the father and mother, and present their little tokens of affection with appropriate speeches: Christmas morning the parents take possession of the parlor, and the children are brought in and receive their presents, both ; useful and ornamental ones, and all enjoy the bountiful supply of candies and Madeira nuts.

There was a peculiar custom in regard to the exist in some parts of Germany. All the famisonate Servant Rupert. To him they brought all the gifts intended for their children, and Thanksgiving appointment, which has at most upon him devolved the task of distributing, in the concurrence of a national Church. true Santa Claus style, the Christmas presents. He is arrayed in a great white fur robe, a mask and flowing periwig, and stout, high buskins; and with his pack of toys he presents an imposing appearance. Christmas Eve he stops at each house, and the parents and those who are old enough to know the secret, make a great show of reverence and respect to him, while the little ones cling to their mother's gown in great fright Rupert announces that his Master, Jesus Christ, has sent him to give something to the good children, but alas! nothing for the naughty ones. The parents then give an account of the behaviour of the children, and if satisfactory, the presents are taken out and given to each; but if any parent is so heartless as to forget all the good actions of his child during the year, and tion to use it frequently in the Name of his Master.

That quaint custom was doubtless due to the babe, induced his mother to return to her fathto training Rupert in Christian knowledge, and he fully repaid her cares. He was especially distinguished for the grace of charity, his whole legend runs, while sleeping on the bank of the Rhine, he had a wonderful vision of glory. He saw an aged man with a company of boys, whom he dipped into the river one by one, and they came out more lovely than before. Then an island rose in the stream, like unto Paradise in beauty; thither the boys were conducted and clothed in shining robes. Rupert beseeched that he might join them, but the venerable man said, "This is not the place for you, Rupert, your life of charity and holiness renders you worthy of a life in heaven, and to see the face of the Transfigured." Instantly a brilliant rainbow spanned the river, and angels appeared with wings of gold, and in the midst of them was the Christ-Child surrounded with glory; St. John kneeled before Him, and ten angels held in their hands the very garment which Rupert had given, a few days before, to a poor child. This garment they put upon the Infant-Christ, Who said to Rupert: "You have fed the hungry and clothed the naked, for such works are given the higher rewards of eternal glory." The vision then vanished and Rupert awoke, and resolved to resign all earthly honors. He started on a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulchre, but returned in a year broken down in health, and died at the age of twenty. In the Convent of Eubingen, we are them, and give them a chance? Will not some told, is still preserved the garment which Bupert gave to the poor child, and which appeared to him in the vision.

There is a beautiful German legend which teaches that unless one can do away with unkind and unforgiving thoughts before Christmas comes, the Christ-Child will not appear. If all injuries are forgiven and quarrels made up, the Blessed Vision may be seen. Mackay has a Blessed Vision may be seen. Mackay has a to how he is to get the money to pay even the beautiful allusion to this in his poem, entitled interest on the debt. Do not cast this earnest "Under the Holly-Bough":

"Ye who have scorned each other, Or injured friend or brother, In this fast fading year; Ye who by word or deed, Have made a kind heart bleed Come gather here!

Let sinned against and sinning,

Forget their strife's beginning. And join in friendship now;-Be links no longer broken,-Be sweet forgiveness spoken Under the Holly-bough,"

The beautiful poems to which the German legends of the Christ-Child have given rise, may be found in every language; and, not only have we many translations of the German hymns into our own tongue, but we have many choice ones by English and American authors. One of the sweetest that I have met with is the following. It is a hymn and prayer combined in one sweet and iovous strain:

'Give heed my he rt; lift up thine eyes: Who is it in you manger lies? Who is this Child so young and fair? The blessed Christ-Child lieth there. Ah, dearest Jesus, Holy Child, Make Thee a bed, soft, undefiled, Within my heart that it may be A quiet chamber kept for Thee.'

CAROLINE F. LITTLE.

"Man's Gift of a Sabbath to God."

On the recent day of the national Thanksgiv ing, an eminent dissenting pastor commended the day in this not unhappy vein: "Our weekly Sabbaths are God's Sabbaths manward; this Thanksgiving Day is man's gift of a Sabbath to his God." How happy a recurrence is this to churchly conception. How adequate a warrant does it present for our Holy Day Celebrations. The Church, in view of the munificence of Divine grace, will not content herself with the consecration of a mere seventh of time; while in the guillotine, and that executions shall take her selection of special days as additional opportunities for devotion, she fixes upon anniversaries long radiant with the memories of those who have been eminent exemplars of this lustrous and transcendent grace. Thus in themselves these Holy Days are clearly signal occasions. And then their origin and appointment are from no merely civil source, with whatsoever ecclesiastical concurrence may gratuitously be given. Holy Days, on the contrary, have the high pre-eminence which springs from the seal and sanction of those to whom directly commandment was given by the Lord of the Sabbath. He, too, further declares "whatsoever ye shall distribution of presents, and, it is said still to bind on earth shall be bound in heaven." By in 1700. so much then as our Lord's authority is above that lies in a village selected some one man to per- of the State, by so much do the claims of a Holy Day exceed those of a variable and indefinite

An Appeal from Kentucky.

To the Editor of the Living Church.

I desire, through your columns, to call the attention of the Church in general to the condition of the Church among the colored people of Kentucky, and especially among those of Lexington, Ky. The fact is, the Church has done little, little indeed for the poor colored people. How can a mission thrive or a church grow, that has a debt of more than $1,000 upon it and a congregation consisting of less than fifty members who are hardly able to pay off the interest of the debt? Is it reasonable to suppose that poor colored people would join the Church and become responsible for the payment of a great debt?

Church Work.

Its Progress and Its Needs as Seen by our Correspondents.

Minnesota.—St. Luke's Parish, Brown's Valley, is a new organization, being formed last June with the above name. Brown's Valley is a town of 500 inhabitants. The Church people here have labored hard for nearly a year to build a small church—a church which shall be fitting for the worship of God and free of debt. They have received about $375 which has enabled them to put up a building 10 by 30 ft. large enough to accomodate their immediate wants. The Parish and especially the Vestry is exceedingly anxious to finish it without burdening it with d bt. Three lots have been given by the town proprietors on which the building stands. The vestry could borrow money on the lots, but then it would burden the property with debt. Are there not some who could help this Parish struggling as it is, and in the right direction? The Parish needs at present ere the building can be used, seats, a small font, Bible and Prayer Book for the Chancel and Communion Set. The seats are an imperative necessity. The Vestry ask all who can to help them if only a little, as they are acting nobly in trying to erect that for God which shall be entirely free of debt. Contributions could be sent either to W. D. Prescott, E. R. Marshall, Senior and Junior Wardens, Brown's Valley, Minnesota, or to the Rev. E. Ashley, Sisseton Agency, D. T.

The above missionary holds monthly Services in St. Luke's which are always well attended and it is expected, could the church be completed, to have a Lay Reader act every Sunday.

This is one of the Church's outposts and the sheep here as well as every interest of the Church should be maintained. Who will help? All subscriptions to this work would be acknowledged in the LIVING CHURCH.

Mississippi.-Mission services were held in Grace Church, Canton, from the 19th to the 24th of Nov. 1882. The Mission was conducted by the Rev. George C. Harris, D. D., of Madison Station, Miss. The services were both interesting and instructive. Short services and Instructions were given every morning at 10 o'clock, and full service with sermon every evening at 7. The Rector assisted in the evening services only. The Bishop visited the Parish on the 25th of Nov., 1882, preached twice and confirmed five persons. One of the candidates had been a Baptist preacher, and may soon become a candidate for the Holy Ministry.

The Rev. Mr. Browne has been the Rector of this Parish for eighteen months only, and now resigns it to take charge of a new and larger mission field, where he has officiated occasionally. This new field will include four Parishes, two of which have neat and complete gothic Churches -Emmanuel, at Winona, and St. Clements, at Vaiden, and two now under way, Grace, Carand Nativity, Greenwood. At Greenwood the frame of the Church is up, and their funds about exhausted. So far they have not gone outside of their Parish for aid. Carrollton they have raised about $500, and are now waiting for the plans and more money. The Bishop visited these Parishes on the 3rd, 4th, 6th and 8th, of Dec. 1882, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Browne. To visit Greenwood and Carrollton it was necessary for the Bishop, (now in his 85th year) to travel sixty miles by stage on a rough road. The weather in the meantime was cold and wet. At these four Parishes the Bishop preached six times, confirmed seven candidates, and baptized one child. The Bishop has authorized the faithful leaders of this noble work, to appeal to the general Church for aid. They have been without services for more than a year; Greenwood never had a Rector. Their efforts deserve encouragement, and the Church in this interesting field will be made strong by faithful and hearty response to their call for

Vermont.—In October last a sermon was preached in St. Paul's Church, Burlington, sketching the history of the Church in Vermont, especially during the past fifty years. The oc-casion was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the complete organization of the Diocese, the Rev. A. H. Bailey, D. D., being the preacher. From the published sermon we learn that for some years in the latter part of the last century the Diocesan Convention consisted of two clergymen and about eight delegates representing six parishes. It was during her membership in the federated dioceses known as "the Eastern Diocese, under Bishop Griswold, that Church matters in Vermont began to brighten and ancient prejudices against the episcopate began to disappear. Bishop Hopkins' vigorous administration followed, after twenty-one of association with other dioceses. The labors and trials of his eventful episcopate are graphically described. During Bishop Bissell's administration of fourteen years the missionary activity of the Diocese has increased, and several large gifts have set forward the regular work of the Diocese besides furnishing the basis of endowments for the missionary fund and for the episcopate. During Bishop Bissell's charge the increase of population in the state has been only about one-eighth of one per cent per annum, while during Bishop Griswolds' time it was one and one-half per cent. The sermon closes with Connecticut .- A mass meeting under the auspices of the Church Temperance Society, was held in Hartford on Nov. 28th. The Bishop presided, and made a very interesting and prac-tical address. Mr. Graham was present and was listened to with great attention. A branch of the Society has been formed in Hartford, with the Bishop as President, and the Revs. J. J. Mc-Cook and J. H. Barbour, Secretaries.

Northern New Jersey .- On Sunday, the 17th inst, the Bishop of Illinois visited Grace Church, Newark, the Rev. George M. Christian, Rector, at the request of Bishop Starkey, who was suffering from severe indisposition. A class f forty-three was presented for Confirmation.

Albany.-On Nov. 12th, the Rev. William Payne, D. D., preached an historical sermon in St. George's Church, Schenestady, on occasion of some alterations being made in the old church edifice. In 1710, the Bev. Thomas Barclay was officiating in Schenectady, a missionary of the English Church in Albany. He writes to the S. P. G. as follows: "From New York to the S. P. G. as follows: the utmost bounds of my parish there is no minister but myself." About the middle of the century the erection of the church seems to have been undertaken. The church is described as a little oblong, stone structure, fifty-six feet long (about half its present length) by thirty-six feet wide, with three windows on each side (the old south door being walled up), and in front a small this imprint: "New York: By Direction of the wooden steeple, crowned by a low bell tower General Convention, Printed by Hugh Gaines, with a cross upon it. It contained thirty-six at the Bible Hanover Square. MDCCXCV."

pews (about one-third its present number), and no gallery, except across the west end, which was reached by a stairway within the church in the north-west corner. The pulpit, with a long flight of stairs, was against the east wall in the centre, with a reading desk in front, and a clerk's pew in front of that, and the altar, with rails on the north side—an arrangement similar to that stll existing in the old church at Duanesborough.' About 1820, the services were kept up for a year or two by Mr. Alonzo Potter, then a tutor in Union College, afterwards Bishop of Penn-sylvania; a tablet to his memory has been placed on the walls of the church by the trustees of the College. During the rectorship of the Rev. Albert Sanders, radical changes were made in the old building and other changes have been made from time to time. A monstrous threedecker pulpit was erected with a communion table in front. Under the pulpit was a hole where the clergymen could go and change his surplice for a black gown. The church was consecrated one hundred years after the foundation was laide by the present Bishop of New York By the recent alterations the galleries have been removed and the altar has been restored to its original location, where it should be, against the east wall. The Rector in his closing remarks says: It is a pleasant thing, and a profitable one, to show a loving interest for God's house; to do what one can for its care and enrichment. No regrets ever follow such acts of Christian piety. Not long ago I attended the consecration of a church which, owing to a financial panic which broke out soon after it was begun, was not finished for ten years. There was present a person who, at the outset of the work, had presented the costly columns of carved stone. Meanwhile, he had made and lost, in the fluctuations of business, three fortunes, and now he was a poor gray haired man. But he was heard to say, as his eyes rested on his noble gifts to the Lord's "That was the best investment I ever made.

On Advent Sunday, the Rev. Joseph Carey, D. D., began the tenth year of his rectorship of Bethesda Church, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. The Rev. Dr. E. N. Potter, President of Union College, was present at the morning Service, and took part in the celebration of the Holy Communion. The musical portion of the Service was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Prof. Porter, of Temple Grove Seminary. The sermon by the Rector was taken from Rom. 13:12, during which he said to the congregation:

"I thank you sincerely and heartily for the loving sympathy and kindness that you have shown your pastor during the years that he has walked in and out among you. There have been differences of opinion, but you will bear me out in saying that your pastor has endeavored to administer the affairs of the parish in a large and broad manner. When recently there were inducements offered me to seek another field of labor, I assure you it was no other consideration than your loving kindness that induced me to stav. having the consciousness that I might lean upon you and depend upon your assistance and ncouragement.

In speaking of the charity work of the parish, the preacher said the number of inmates of the "Home of the Good Shepherd" had been 10; number of meals for the year, 3,173. The Home, with the new building, is now better equipped for the work than ever. The sewing school is a good institution, and many garments have been made and distributed. The baptisms for the year were reported to be 51; confirmations, 39; marriages, 19; burials attended, 47; pastoral calls made, upwards of 1500.

At 3 P. M., the Sunday School anniversary was held, the Service began with the singing of the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." An address was made by the rector, after which various re-ports were presented. The school is under the man agement of Col. Wm. M. Searing, and has on its roll 459 scholars. The sewing school at the Home has 6 teachers and 45 pupils

The Treasurer of the Sunday School reported he receipts to be $292.95; the disbursements, $132.62. The Treasurer of the chapel fund reported an investment of the same in bonds and in bank amounting to $510.

Louisiana -The Rev. Dr. Leacock, the Rector of Christ Church, New Orleans has resigned his position on account of age. The vacancy has been filled by the election of the Rev. Alexander Drysdale. now Rector of Chris Church, Mobile, Alabama, who has accepted will enter upon his new duties on the first Sunday after Epiphany, Jan. 7. Church is the oldest church organization in Louisiana. In the progress of the "American" population up town, the location became inconvenient for the congregation and the project was entertained of selling out and removing. But though a very large offer was received for the ground, better counsels prevailed, and as Trinity, New York, so in New Orleans, will Christ Church stand in a great business thoroughfure pointing its tall spire to heaven and reminding men of immortality.

The Rev. Dr. Thompson of Trinity has not yet announced his decision in regard to the Episcopate of Mississippi but it is generally believed he will accept. It is a remarkable fact that all the successive rectors of this church since the war, have been elected to the Episco. pate and the congregation solace their grief at the prospect of parting with Dr. Thompson with the boast of giving a new Bishop to the Church triennially. The Rev. Mr. Upton of St. George's, New Orleans, has left for Greenville, Alabams; a quiet but diligent Parish Priest, his loss is deeply felt by his congregation.

The ladies of St. Stephens Parish at Williamsport have undertaken to build a Parsonage, which will be completed at an early date. The local papers speak of it as "well suited to the purposes for which it is designed and an orna. ment to the town.

Bishop Galleher is engaged in visiting the country parishes, spending a Sunday at each.

New York .- The anniversary of the Niobrara League was held in Grace Church. New York, on the evening of the third Sunday in Advent, Dec. 17, The great edifice was crowded. A letter was read from the Bishop of New York, by the Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, Rector of the Parish, in which the Bishop expressed regret at his inability to be present, and referred to his deep interest in the work of the League. Dr. Potter then introduced Mr. Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, who delivered an address on the Niobrara mission and the Indian Problem. It was the same substantially which he deliverd at the noteworthy missionary meeting recently held in Brooklyn, and reported at the time, in full, in the LIVING CHURCH. It is needless to say, that much interest was awakened.

Massachusetts. -The Memorial of St. Andrew's Church, Scicuate, is a handsome pamphlet, giving an account of the Memorial Service, with the historical address of the Rev. Wm. H. Brooks, D. D. There is much of historical interest in the records of a parish 150 years old. The Bible from which the Lessons are read in this church was a present from the S. P. G., printed in 1723. The Prayer Book bears

The St. John's Guild of St. John's Church. Boston Highlands, observed its second anniversary on the evening of the second Monday in Advent, Dec. 11th, with a Service in the church, after which reports of the work for the year were read. This Guild is so differently constituted from Guilds in general, that it may not be amiss to explain its manner of working. In one way the Guild is an organization of organizations. It is also a general missionary society. Its members are persons over 15 years of age and no obligation is incurred in becoming a member. So-cial meetings are held once a month. No legislation or other business is transacted at the meetings. The Sector is President of the Guild. and he appoints the other officers and a head and he appoints the other officers and a head for each committee—or chapters as they are called. There are fourteen viz.: The "Altar," "St. Mary's" for young women, "Guild of St. Andrew's," for young men; "Missionary," for sewing, "St. Timothy's," care of library; "Literary and Social;" St. Paul's," ushers; "Dorcas," floral; "St. Barnabas," visiting new comers; "St. Luke's," for sick and needy; "Church," for cleanliness and decent order of the sanctuary;
"St. Cecilia's," for the music, and "Burial Insurance." The head of each chapter appoints the remaining members of the chapter. heads, with the officers of the Guild, form an Executive Committee. The Secretary reports 209 names on the roll of members, and eleven meetings have been held with an average attendance of 62. Although the night of the anniversary was a stormy one, there was a congregation of about three hundred present. Five clergy-men were in the chancel, viz.: The Revs. Dr. Courtney, Rector of St. Paul's Church; Mr. Baldwin, of St. Mark's Church; Mr. Metcalf, of the Messiah, Auburndale, and the Rector of the parish, the Rev. George S. Conover, and his the Church and for their own spiritual interests, assistant, the Rev. Benjamin S. Saunderson, that this matter, so easily accomplished, shall The Rev. N. K. Bishop, Rector of Emmanuel Church, Louisville, was in the congregation.
Dr. Courtney and Mr. Baldwin were present as speakers of the evening. Mr. Baldwin spoke first, and made a very eloquent address. He made the point that all life was holy if lived in the fear of God. There was a time when the Church ministered to the soul alone, not thinking of the body; but Christ taught differently. Men were wont to think that religion was designed simply for the conduct in the sanctuary. In the Old Testament, everything was inspired for Israel by God. We must remember that when our Lord ascended into heaven He took with Him both His body and soul. God joined the body and soul together, but too often man has ruthlessly torn them asunder. The lesson which had just been read, I. Cor., xii. chapter, showed that God's work required a diversity of gifts. The Holy Spirit came with a seven-fold gift. All the churches were very good required the best work we could do and although it might seem small and feeble to us

On Christmas Day, a yet we could receive an inspiration for it through Dorcas who had but her needle, or the widow with her two mites. Dr. Courtney in addressing the Guild, drew an impressive lesson from the passage in Holy Scripture, Prov. xxx., 26: "The conies are but a feeble folk yet make they their houses in the rocks." We in doing our work must first make our house in the Rock Jesus Christ. The feeble folk were necessary. We cannot all be Apostles, prophets, teachers, and yet however feeble, we can all have faith, hope, and charity, the greatest being charity. The speaker drew a glowing picture of the state of a good man at the last day. Such a man woud meet his Lord feeling confident that a reward was awaiting him, but the unfaithful servant who had slothfully used the talent given him would be the one afraid to render an account. This report is necessarily brief and disjointed, but the addresses will long keep a place in the memory of the members, and they only wish that they could have been listened to in their entirety by the readers of this account.

Alabama.-The new church edifice in course of erection at Anniston, is a Gothic building, measuring 40 feet by 88 feet, including the porch and a recessed chancel. It is built of rubble stone work, and will be finished inside with carved cedar wood. A clerestory will greatly add to the effect of the interior. It is expected that the tower will be furnished with a chime of bells; the first, if we are not mistaken, that will have been secured for any church in the diocese. The estimate cost of the whole when completed $25,000.

The whole of Anniston may be said to be owned by two companies, namely, the Wood-stock Iron Co., who are the proprietors of the Furnaces; and the Anniston Manufacturing Co., to whom belongs the extensive Cotton Factory. To these corporations, mainly, the erection of the proposed beautiful church is due. It is reand self-seeking, to witness such a case as this, in which capitalists employing and controlling a large amount of labor, are ready to recognize the tremendous responsibility thus thrown upon them, by making provision for the spiritual needs of those who are aiding them to accumulate

The only reature that distinguishes this parish, with its thirty-five communicants, from other small parishes, is, the fact to which we have referred, that it was founded by and is maintained through the faithfulness of the two great Companies and of the resident Church people, in a large measure for the express purpose of extending Church-privileges to the operatives.

The Companies have made a happy selection in their Chaplain, the Rev. Wallace Carnahan, who is evidently "the right man in the right

There is quite an interesting history connected with St. Paul's Church, Jacksonville, which will without doubt be new to the readers of the LIVING CHURCH, and we believe will not be without interest to any of them. The leading citizens of the place were originally Lutherans from North Carolina, who, about forty years ago, having abandoned the hope of sustaining the religious ministrations of their own Communion, resolved to unite in the formation of a parish in connection with the Episcopal Church. Chief among these was Col. John C. Hoke, who threw himself into the movement with characteristic energy, and, until John C. Hoke, who threw himself into the movement with characteristic energy, and, until his dying day, proved to be a most true and devoted son of the Church. For a long term of years, he held the office of Lay-reader; and, in adfault of the ministration of a Boston.

TILTON & CO., Boston. priest, used to keep the church open every Sunday, reading prayers and a sermon, and carrying on a Sunday School. At every visit of the Bishop, he found a class ready for Confirmation, which had been duly prepared for the sacred Rite by that faithful and earnest layman.

Something over thirty years ago, Col. Hoke began to raise among his friends, far and near, funds for the erection of a church building. Wherever his business requirements took him, he kept this object steadily in view; and, from year to year, made a careful record of the various amounts received, and charged himself with both principal and interest. Pursuing this upright course with the trust he had assumed, he found himself, at the end of ten years, in possession of $2,200 towards the erection of church building. This was about the period that the late Civil War broke out, and the Collost no time in putting the work into the hands of the builder, at the same time presenting him with one of Upjohn's well known plans for a framed church, by which to work. And so, the building was erected; and it may be said with truth, that, to the fidelity and promptness of this true Churchman, the present generation of Church people in Jacksonville are indebted for their beautiful little church. But for him, in the sad and troublous times that fell upon our Southern brethren in those years of tribulation, there would be no now no holy House of Prayer for them to worship in. And it is a building of which the parish may well be proud. The windows are filled with stained glass; the chancel the stained glass is the chancel that the first Booton them. dows are filled with stained glass; the chancel-window being a Memorial to the first Rector, the late Rev. D. D. Flower. There is seating capacity for about 150 persons, but many more can be accommodated, when occasion requires. Near the chancel a mural tablet has been erected, in memory of Col. Hoke, the "founder and senior warden of this Church." That good and faithful man still lives in the hearts and memories of those who in early youth were by him. ries of those who, in early youth, were by him taught and trained in the Church's holy ways. The name of "Uncle John." as he was familiarly and affectionately called, is still and long will be a "household-word" in the mouths of his former friends and neighbors, of whom not a few were connected with him by family ties.

It will hardly be believed that the building erected through his painstaking is left unguarded by Insurance apainst risk of fire. A frame building, with shingled roof, a solitary spark falling upon it in a dry season would be suf-ficient to destroy in a few minutes, all the results of its founder's labor and self-sacrifice. And with it would doubtless go the parish organization. Surely, those who are interested in the matter, will see to it, as well out of respect to the memory of John Hoke, as out of regard for
