The Forty-eighth Annual Convention of this diocese assembled at St. Andrew's Church, Ann Arbor, on Wednesday, June 7. Besides the ternal fellowship as they craved, with paternal Bishop, there were present forty-five clergymen and fifty-two delegates.

The Convention had been invited to Ann Arbor by the people of St. Andrew's Church, with natural pride in their beautiful parish property, which had just been made complete by the erection of the handsome stone chapel and parsonbuildings, the Church need not be ashamed of the group which is distinctively her own.

The sermon at the opening Service was preached by the Rev. A. W. Seabrease of Flint, from II. Cor. iv:18. "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which ing herself of the great advantages which the are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." Lamenting the materialistic tendenthe relations of science and religion, the preacher instanced from history numerous examples the unseen, and exhorted the congregation to similar heroic faith to-day. The sermon abounded in apt and well chosen quotations, and was felicitous in illustration.

At the Bishop's request the Rector of the parish, the Rev. Wyllys Hall, D. D., read a circular Relations, requesting aid for the Christian Catholic Church of Switzerland, and the offering was accordingly appropriated to Bishop Herzog. A very large number received the Holy Com-

The kind offices of the Church Association in acting as the Bishop's disbursing agent in the burnt district were acknowledged, and also the work of Miss Smiley, and that of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese. The Church would be rewarded for her active and generous charity by the possession of corresponding spiritual influence in the communities thus relieved. Earnest opportunities, and the Bishop asked the parishes to pledge, not only as much as was pledged last year, but $1,000 more. The Bishop reported nine churches consecrated and 748 persons confirmed, the latter number showing a large increase, and an uncommonly large spiritual harvest. But the main interest of the Address centered in the argument for the proposed Collegiate Hall for Church students at the University. On the second day the long-pending question how far the Convention could recognize the Church Association of Michigan as agent for the diocese, and whether the Trustees of the Proletter of the joint Committee on Ecclesiastical testant Episcopal Church for the Diocese of Michigan should be set aside for the new agency, came up in the report of the committee appointed to arrange a basis of agreement between the Convention and the Church Association. The latter had offered to enact a by-law by which it would elect annually in place of the retiring Convention. A business-like form of contract between the Association and the Convention was also proposed. The Eighth Annual Council of this young but flourishing Diocese met in the Cathedral, on the 6th inst. Before the formal organization, Mr. Joseph Moran, Jr., was Ordained to the Diaconate. The Rev. George Vernor was unanimously elected Secretary, and the Rev. Charles T. Susan, Assistant Secretary.

The Bishop's Annual Address was an earnest and suggestive plea for true Catholicity. It was listened to with profound attention and created a very deep impression. After congratulating both clergy and laity on the harmony which prevailed in the Diocese, on its growth and on the material prosperity of its faithful, Bishop Brown went on to speak of the danger arising from the rapid increase of a foreign population in our midst, and of the necessity of acquainting the immigrant with the pure and authoritative character of that branch of Holy Church, of which, under God's grace, we are members.

A true Catholic Church, of lineage easily traced, with a ministry of Apostolic authority, with Sacraments whole and undefiled, and a liturgy venerable, evangelical, fervent, all-embracing, with a people zealous for the honor of God and the welfare of human souls, would have attractions for the thoughtful and energetic men who come from the old world to make a lasting abode with us. A mere sect might naturally turn from such strangers. A narrow national institution might take no interest in them. But the Holy Catholic Church rises above all differences of nation, or class or color. It is God's Kingdom for Asiatics, Europeans, Africans and Americans. It is the rightful, spiritual home, not only of Englishmen, but of Scandinavians, Teutons, Celts and Latins. We are not loyal to our great Master, if we do not make His will known to these people. It is a sin against God and against the souls of these our brethren if we fail to bear his message of love and peace

But the clergy alone cannot bear the sacred message. Priests and laymen form but one body; they are indispensable one to the other, and need mutual sympathy, mutual encouragement, and above all mutual forbearance.

The following was submitted as a summa

The report of the trustees of the Diocese furnished the following items of interest: the endowment fund of the Diocese at this date The Committee on Canons reported a number amounts to $7,103.76; the sustentation fund contains cash in the sum of $2,006.16.

An interesting report of the work done at Cadle Home at Green Bay was read, showing they required mission property to be conveyed to that the total cash receipts for the year amounted to $1,321.45 and the expenditures to $1,318.-35, leaving a balance on hand of $3.10. The present number at 15.

The Forty-fifth Annual Convention of this vided that a special Committee should nominate Diocese was held in St. Paul's Cathedral, and the Convention elect, at least one clergyman | Indianapolis, June 6th, 7th and 8th. The Bishop, who persons, only. Church Building Fund Commission reported for many months has been unable to perform any of the duties of his office, opened the Convention and read his address which was confined to the report of his Episcopal acts. It was favorable mention of the Church Sunday-school gratifying to all present to see the Bishop so much improved, and to hear his hopeful words mention was made of the Church's missionary ary, now in charge of a Church clergyman; the as to the resumption of all his duties. He also recently organized St. Paul's Grammar School expressed his sense of great indebtedness to Bishop McLaren, Bishop Dudley, and Bishop and on their recommendation a large number of Seymour, the latter of whom had performed so large a part of the Episcopal work done.

proffering any assistance he might suggest. The Committee appointed to wait on the Bishop, and learn his wishes, reported that he returned hearty thanks for the expression of sympathy, but did not deem any assistance necessary save such as would be readily obtainable. The Bishop also stated from the floor of the House, the Rev. Edward Bradley, of Madison having been called to the chair, that he did not approve of "ecclesiastical bigamy" and could not therefore consent to the election of an assistant Bishop, but should he find himself unable to perform his duties he preferred to resign. As to the division of the Diocese, he was in favor of small dioceses, and whenever any portion of Indiana could present such an endowment as the General Convention would deem sufficient, say $50,000, he would gladly give his consent; but as that time had not come, he did not see any clear way to action in that regard.

On the whole the condition of the diocese is exceedingly promising, and the Bishop, who expects to resume work in the autumn, will find a willing and active Diocese awaiting his direction.

The Sixty-fifth Convention met in St. Paul's Church, Steubenville, on the evening of June 6th. The sermon was preached by the Rev. T. Lyle, Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Cleveland.

The Bishop in his annual address paid an eloquent tribute to the late President Garfield, and suggested that the prayer for the persons about to be executed be read for his murderer the Sunday before his execution. In the list of Consion to commend the work done at St. Paul's. Steubenville, and called attention to the memorial window to Rev. On the subject of parish elections his opinion was that vestries had the right to pass by-laws prescribing the amount of contribution to entitle persons to vote, and his definition of a layman was a baptized member of the Church. The commission to raise $1,000,000 for a church building fund was commended; the work was going on very slowly; Ohio had raised $1,800 of the necessity of additional legislation in regard to marriage and divorce.

The constitution was amended so as to permit each chapel, belonging to a duly-constituted Parish, and each Mission to send a delegate to the Convention. The word "layman" in the

We trust that our National and State Legislatures may wisely exercise their constitutional power in all these directions, and that executive and judicial officers may firmly and impartially enforce the laws. The matter of chief general interest engaging the attention of the Council was the erection of an Episcopal Residence. It was suggested by the Bishop, in his report as proper to be considered at this time, and after debate resolutions were passed appointing a committee to receive contributions and on certain conditions to buy a lot and proceed to build. The location will be Parkersburg, where the Bishop now lives.

The Council refused to recommend the proposed change in the ratification of the Prayer Book.

Animated meetings were held in the interest of Diocesan Missions and of General Missions. Addresses were delivered and the offerings of the people received.

The Council adjourned on Saturday the 10th.

The Ninety-second Annual Convention met in Christ Church, Milford, ou the 7th inst., with 19 clerical and 20 lay delegates in attendance. Mr. S. M. Curtis was re-elected Secretary.

The Bishop in his Annual Address, of which 2,000 copies are to be printed by order of the Convention, gave a minute and interesting history of the Church in the diocese of Delaware

The dispute about the rectorship of Holy Trinity, Wilmington, came before the Convention in the shape of a memorial from the Rev. Dr. Frost, setting forth his real or supposed grievances and asking redress. The document was referred to a committee, which recommended that no action be taken in the matter. and the report was sustained.

It was decided to raise by annual instalments a sum of $30,000 for the endowment of the the amount. The Bishop also spoke strongly of | Episcopate, and after re-electing the old Standing Committee, the Convention adjourned, after a session which commenced on Wednesday at 9 A. > The Southern Deanery of Illinois met in the 6th. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Locke. The Rev. Charles B. Hodge, of Momence, was elected Secretary for the year. Reports were made by the Dean, the Rev. D. S. Phillips, of work at Kankakee and Momence where the Church of the Good Shepherd, under Rev. Mr. Hodge, is reported to be ready for consecration sometime next September. The Rev. Mr. Holst reported the Church debt at Streator as virtually settled, and the condition of his parish as promising. Some interesting statements of his labors at Farm Ridge were given by Rev. Henry T. Hiester, the pastor. The Rev. Mr. Gregg rendered a highly encouraging account of what had been done during his rectorship at Ottawa; the improvements in and bout the church, the increasing attendance at Services, and the financial condition so materially better proved most flattering. Of the condition of parochial affairs at Lockport, the pastor (Rev. L. W. Applegate) contributed a cheering recital. The rector of Wilmington reported that in connection with the work of the Parish there, he had begun services also at Braidwood, and at Coal City—points five and eight miles from the town first named—where the Church of the Redeemer is—and hopes ere long, to secure plenty of worship for them.

California.—The little church of St. Mark's, at Berkeley is looking up, and has lately received some new and valuable members. Up to the present time it has been sustained by the Mission, but now it has been dropped from the mission list, and it is anticipated that it will henceforth be self-supporting. It is situated in a region which is spoken of by strangers as "a most delightful place." Being the seat of the Being the seat of the California University, it attracts good intellectual society. It is quite in the country, and yet very accessible from San Francisco, being only 40 minutes distant by rail and ferry.

Indiana.—The completion of the rectory of St. Thomas' Church, Plymouth, was delightfully celebrated by a social gathering of a large number of ladies and gentlemen who were present, upon the invitation of the Rector, Rev. J. J. Faude and his wife, to take a look through the building, and also to pay their respects to the Right Rev. Bishop Talbott who was present. The building stands on the grounds immediately north of the church and is of the Gothic order of architecture. It is elegantly finished throughout and furnished with everything necessary for comfort and convenience. The cost of the building has been about four thousand dollars. On this occasion it was brilliantly illuminated, and decorated with flowers from top to bottom.

Mississippi.—A Correspondent of the Southern Churchman writes about the venerable Bishop of Mississippi, whose diocese has recently elected for him an assistant in the person of Bishop Wingfield, but who declined:

"As I passed through Vicksburg there was much interest felt in getting Bishop Wingfield as assistant to Bishop Green. Bishop Green is an old friend, and used to pay me an annual visit things to them in their course. every year before the war, although I lived on the Louisiana side of the river, just outside of his diocese. Two years ago, as I went South, the old gentleman got on the steamboat from a country landing after dark and alone, with his satchel in hand, making the tour of his diocese. He left the boat to fill an appointment at daybreak on a cold and rainy day. While on the boat we had an hour of most pleasant conversation of old times. He was full of zeal, and in such fine spirits that he went to the negro band that was playing minstrel airs in the cabin of the boat and gave them twenty five cents to play the tune of 'Carry me back to Old Virginia!' It would be a scene worthy of the best artist should his son be made his assistant, to see this old man with his white hair and benignant face pronouncing his blessing upon him as his successor in the diocese.

Missouri.-The Rev. Dr. Runcie, Rector of Christ Church, St. Joseph, preached his eleventh anniversary sermon on Trinity Sunday. From his address we take a few items. In June, 1871, there was one frame church seating 300 persons. now there is a substantial brick and stone edifice seating 800, and a handsome mission chapel (Holy Trinity), with a seating capacity of 220. In 1871, there were 120 communicants, now there are 350. Since the commencement of his rectorship, Dr. Runcie has baptized 420 (80 adults), presented for Confirmation 243, solemnized 185 marriages, and officiated at 198 funerals. More poses. All this may indicate a fair degree of on the death of the Rev. H. A. Yardley, late prosperity. The Bishop of the Diocese preached to a large and attentive congregation. The musical portion of the Services was under the direction of Prof. G. L. Wilson, was under the direction of Frot. G. The Reunion of the Berkeley Alumni began on Tuesday, with a Mid-day Choral Celebration of comfortable, quiet Home for gentlewomen the Holy Communion in St. Luke's Chapel, Middletown, when the President of the Alumni, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Niles was the Celebrant, and the Rev. John Binney, and the Rev. Samuel Hart his assistants.

By evening a large number of the Alumni had arrived. Headed by the students they marched in procession from the Hebrew Room to the Chapel for Evensong which was choral, and the annual sermon. The Rev. Orlando Witherspoon was the preacher and his subject was Ezekiel Preachers and modern Priests. Though the hood of the Good Shepherd. sermon was long, it was listened to with deep interest by all the brethren.

After the Service the Alumni returned to the To the Editor of the Living Church: Hebrew room, where ancient roots were for a while forgotten in friendly intercourse and brotherly greetings. Wednesday, the 31st., Morning Prayer was said at 8:30 in the chapel. The business meeting of the Alumni followed. There were reports of several committees, but the most interesting thing done was the presentation of Resolutions ics. Every word of these resolutions, which perhaps every reader of the LIVING CHURCH will see, every one felt to be only too true. The Revs. John Townsend, and Storrs O. Seymour, and the Rt. Rev. President gave deserved tributes to the saintly man, and measures were committee appointed being the Revs. W. H. Vibbert, John Binney, and Samuel Hart.

The Ordination Service was held in the Church of the Holy Trinity, the procession forming in the chapel of the church. There were between sixty and seventy clergy in surplices, ing, against the loose and popular preaching of the day; and was plain and eloquent in his address to the candidates.

The Candidates were presented by the Rev. Mr. Binney. Bishop Williams commended them to the prayers of the congregation and said the Litany. Bishop Littlejohn asked the questions and ordained his two candidates, and then the Bishop of Connecticut ordained the other five. The Gospel was read by Horace Hall Buck. Bishop Williams celebrated the Holy Communion assisted by his brother bishop.

Reception of a Sister. Correspondence of the Living Church.

On Thursday, the 28th of May, a special Service was held in the chapel of St. Barnabas er into the Sisterhood of the Good Shepherd. The altar was tastefully and appropriately adorned with flowers for the occasion. Of the clergy, there were present the Rector of the Order, the Rev. Dr. Gallaudet, and the Rector of the Mission, the Rev. Henry C. Mayer, with the Rev. Mr. Woodruff, the Superintendent of the City Missions, and the Rev. Mr. Warner, who was a former Rector, but who is at present the Pastor of the Church of the Beloved Disciple on 89th street.

Mr. Warner made an address which was very beautiful and effective. The probationer was accompanied by the Sister Superior, who presented her at the chancel rail where she was received by the Rev. For the furtherance of this object, a mass meeting was held in St. Ann's Rectory in March, at which time a Committee of Associates was appointed to make these wants more widely known, and to ask for contributions towards renting or building a house. Circulars have since been issued, stating that Bishop Potter has authorized Dr. Gallaudet to make known the Bishop's approval of this method to whom he held up as an example for modern secure the much needed House for the Sister-

Your paper reaches us every Saturday, filled with precious reading, and, as we are deprived of Church privileges, the contents are devoured eagerly. To your readers, who have the Church ever ready to administer to their spiritual wants, I would say, show a just appreciation while you can. Sometime you may be deprived of its sacred privilege.

We live in a beautiful seaport town of 4,000 inhabitants. Nature has done much for the place, and the people are social, stirring and active, and if the Church were here it would be to me a beautiful place indeed There are about twelve communicants here who scarcely ever hear the Services read. I am the only male communicant. There is a movement being made in the direction of having our large bay surveyed in view of a breakwater. If we should succeed and get an appropriation, we should have one of the finest harbors in this part of the world; then no doubt the Church would find its way here, and we should no longer mourn for the ways of OTIS E. A Beautiful Whitsun Service.

Correspondence of the Living Church.

The children of St. Stephen's Sunday-school, New York, held their Annual Spring Festival on Whitsun Day. The awarding of testimonials for Regular Attendance, for Perfect Lessons, and for Correct Deportment took place in the Sunday school room, with singing and collects, and in the presence of interested friends. The testimonials consisted of valuable colored chromos in large handsome frames, and were of three grades. The kind pastor referred very touchingly to members of the fold who had during the year been called to the rest of Paradise. Among those was a sweet boy eight years of age who was marked "perfect" in every respect, and who was very happy in anticipation of receiving his prize. The prize was there and was given to his sorrowing widowed mother as a perpetual reminder of the worthiness of her dear departed

Honorable mention was made of those who were faithful in all their duties, but who could not receive a testimonial because they had not been members of the school a full year. After the brief exercises in the school room, the children marched into the church singing the processional 'Onward Christian Soldiers!" and at the close of Evening Prayer which these children always attend in the Church proper, their Whitsun offerings were received, class by class with appropriate texts, and placed on the Altar. Their gifts this year were divided among the Indians, Haitiens, Japanese, City Missions and a struggling parish in the Southwest.

Letters of acknowledgement were then read from the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, from the Rev. Mr. Kerr of Haiti, from the Rev. Mr. Mayer on behalf of Japan and from the Sundayschool in Bastrop, La.

The Altar decorations of red and white were both instructive and beautiful. The central panel of the reredos was covered with flame colored feathery grasses from South America, representing tongues of fire, which served as a back ground to the white marble Altar Cross, producing a rich and striking effect. The side panels of white with sacred monograms of crimson and ticular time. Now, if Christianity is satisfied gold, were wreathed with flame and smilax, and silver vases in the centre of each supported white and scarlet blossoms like those which also richly adorned the triple garden of the Cross. Conspicuously arranged on both sides of the chancel, in floral letters of white and red, were the words-The Comforter is come. Spanning the chancel recess, was an elegant arch of Arbor-Vitæ, on the top of which was a descending dove with outspread wings, bearing in its bill a message from the Holy Spirit which it represented: "My peace I give unto you." Seven white lilies were grouped around it, and from the arch depended tiny shields of evergreen, on which letters were arranged corresponding in number to the classes in the school. These letters when placed in position showed the words in crimson carnations, "Offered to the Lord," which the children recognized as applying to their offerings.

The discipline and manner of conducting the school are admirable, the objects being to instil into the impressible minds of the young, revererence for God's House and for all things pertaining to His Holy Word and to the Church, and an intelligent understanding of the Church Catechism, such as shall leave them well grounded in her doctrines and worship.

To the Editor of the Living Church:

I am aware that the accepted Canons of good taste forbid an author to review his reviewers. Prudence would also suggest, that the favorable mention of my book upon "The Creed and Modern Thought" both in England and America. and the strong commendation it has received, should be suffered to stand, without objection to the few strictures that have appeared. If the book had been published upon merely personal considerations, I might submit to those Canons, exercise prudence, and remain silent. But the motive, of which I am most conscious, is that the book may accomplish the utmost good of which it is capable. Therefore, I venture the suggestion that my English reviewers have read it in leaps, They would not otherwise, I think, say that I had assumed authority of the Holy Scriptures, before showing, upon purely philosohical grounds, that they were entitled to a position of authority. My argument, though I grant succinct, is, I think, clear; indeed, I have been voluntarily so assured by one at least, who is competent to judge. My points are these: 1. The Infinite is, avowedly or necessarily, acknowledged by every philosopher. 2. The Finite, not being itself able to lay hold of the Infinite, the Infinite may reach out to the Finite, and, if any communication exist between them, must manifest itself.

3. This manifestation is capable of evincing and proving itself, or it would not be a manifes-

4. It has so evinced and proved itself by One Who has shown Himself with all needful confirmations, as the manifest Infinite. God, Father, Pantocrat, Almighty, Creator, having been proved possible, probable, certain, this Revealer further show Himself very God-manifest.

5. This God-manifest is further shown and proved to be incarnate. Hence a God-man, mission of pupils is this: The orphaned daughnecessarily the God-man, stands at the outer verge of the Finite, forming its only link of Sixty girls are now being maintained and eduunion with the Infinite.

6. Man, having pushed outward to the farthest bound of the Finite can, of course, push no farther. He must stand there forever gazing into the void, or must lay hold of the hand reached out to him.

7. This human link with the Divine, this Godmanifest, incarnate, does, as He necessarily His word is truth.

- 8. Having come out thus, through fair and open common ways of philosophy, to this verge of the Finite, and formed the Link, man must be content to remain forever in dark ignorance, or must listen to the Word.
- 9. The utterances of the Word, are contained in a Book. The authenticity and genuineness of the Book being proved, its authority is established.

This argument is, I think, set forth in "The Creed and Modern Thought;" and authority from the Bible is not claimed for the argument, but for practical and doctrinal details subsequent to the argument.

There is another point in which my American reviewers, with the single exception of one in the American Church Review, are possibly mistaken. Some English reviewers have also classed the work among Apologetics-in the modern sense. Now I submit that the distinct position taken throughout the book, is that Christianity needs no apology. While answering objections, for the purpose of cutting off "occasion to those who desire occasion," the whole tenor of the book is positive and not negative. It attempts to show that, upon the philosophical ground itself, upon a fair analysis of humanity at large and man in person, Christianity alone, amid all the philosophies, gives every man all he needs, and humanity at large all it can encompass. Thus Christianity, in this age as in every other, is positive not negative, aggressive, not defensive merely, demanding not sufferance but acceptance; and taking its stand firmly on the plane of modern thought, as it has ever done on the planes of thought in all ages, claiming the right, and no more, to be heard fairly, tested fully, adjudged honestly and wisely, and then to receive either adoption or rejection, with their several consequences.

The current philosophy of the age shows the prevailing ideas, principles, and fundamental concepts upon which the most improved systems are based, and the most popular and common views are builded. They therefore indicate the line of instruction which active and aggressive Christianity should follow, at any parwith stumbling along, down the ages, apologizing-in the modern sense-for its existence, and defending itself merely against attacks, it may not indeed wholly lose its Divine likeness, but it will fall far short of its Divine Mission.

The Creed, being the concentrated essence of Christianity, cannot in this age afford to act only on the defensive. If it is the very declaration of the Divine Manifestation, the Word of Heavenly Revelation crystalized, then it is the message of the Lord to this, as to every other generation.

Now the evidence that it is this message, lies in the fact that it can lay itself article by article, point by point, alongside current philosophical views, with their correlative habits of popular thought or practice, and show itself the one sufficient guide and teacher of wisdom. The humanities are the leading subjects of modern interests. The Creed is more full of the glory and dignity of man, than all human philosophy, ancient or modern taken together. Nothing else gives such a picture of human exaltation, as that of the possible adoption of sons unto God, which it both exhibits in idea, and shows a sufficient way to obtain, through the Incarnation. This is the special message of the Creed to this humanitarian age. It is the duty of the messengers of the Lord now to make this message clear, It cannot be done defensively. It need not be done offensively. It should, however, be done aggressively; in all love and charity, indeed, but with all earnestness also.

Now, if "The Creed and Modern Thought" has helped put the Creed in the positive and progressive position, the book has done what I wished it might. Anything less than this, would be less than I intended. B. FRANKLIN. Shrewsbury, N. J., June 10, 1882.

A Festival in an Asylum.

Correspondence of the Living Church.

Founder's Day was celebrated at the Burd Asylum, Philadelphia, on Thursday afternoon, June 1st. As is the custom on this day, the chapel wore its festal garb; the altar was decorated with bouquets and festoons of smilax; and the baptistery was filled with lilies, azaleas, and ferns. Evening Prayer was recited by the Rector of S. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, under the direction of which parish the Asylum is conducted. The double-quartette from S. Stephen's lent their assistance; and Prof. D. D. Wood, the organist of that Church, composed a Benedic anima mea for the Service, which was sung by the children alone. The Rev. G. D. Barton, warden, presented to the Bishop those who had won honors for deportment, housework, and scholarship. Bishop Stevens addressed the pupils, after which the anthem, "How lovely are the Messengers," was sung, and the Benediction given. The children were dismissed, singing the Processional, "Daily, daily sing the praises."

The Burd Asylum was founded by the late Mrs. E. H. Burd, in 1856. The purpose of the charity is to afford a home to orphan girls, where they may be educated in all the arts of housewifery, as well as trained in the general branches of learning. By the terms of agreement, the Asylum is never to pass out of the control of the Church. The only preference shown in the adters of clergymen are received before others. cated by this charity.

THE CHRISTIAN LAW CONCERNING MARRIAGE in response to the practical inquiries of students AND DIVORCE. A sermon preached at the Church of the Advent, Boston, Sunday, April 16, and at St Anne's, Lowell, Mass., Sunday, May 7. In Eastertide, 1882. By A. C. A. Hall, M. A. (of the Society of John the Evangelist), Assistant Rector of the Church of the Advent. A Williams & Co., Boston.

A Society is in existence, entitled the "New England Divorce Reform League," composed of gentlemen from all leading Christian bodies, both Catholic and Protestant, and having for its aim "to promote an improvement in public sentiment and legislation on the subject of Divorce." Of this body, the Rev. Theodore D. Woolsey. D. D., LL. D., is President, the Governor of Massachusetts, Vice President, and the Bishop of the Diocese one of the Executive Committee. A request was made by the League, to all ministers in New England, both Catholic and Protestant, that, either on the State Fast Day, or on the nearest suitable Sunday, they would call the attention of their respective congregations to the great and spreading evil which threatens all the best interests of the country, from the growing disregard of the Christian Law of Marriage, especially with regard to Divorce.

It was in reference to this call that the sermon before us was written and preached; and well and wisely has Father Hall accomplished his delicate task. He sets out by declaring the Christian Law of Marriage, as laid down by Scripture and received by the Church, and then proceeds to exhibit the actual practice of our country, generally. As its practical result. through the facility with which divorces can be obtained, it is shown, that, in the New England States, 2,000 families are broken up every year, and 4,000 persons divorced!

An immense amount of information upon the subject of Marriage and Divorce is compressed within the fow pages of this little pamphlet, and we commend it very strongly to all; since the matter of which it treats is one literally of universal interest.

THE HOLY BIBLE, with an explanatory and critical commentary, and a Revision of the Translation. By Bishops and other clergy of the Anglican Church. Edited by F. C. Cook, M. A., Canon of Exeter, New Testament, Vol IV. Hebrews—The Revelation of St. John. New York: Charles Scribners' Sons, 1882. Cloth, Royal 8 vo. pp. 844.

With this volume, the "Speaker's Commenta ry" is complete. It is one of the ablest of the series. Dr. Kay, who writes on the "Epistle to the Hebrews," has a strong and very practical argument in favor of the Pauline authorship. Archdeacon Lee departs from the method elsewhere uniformly adopted, and gives an insight into the controversy concerning the varying interpretations of St. John's Revelation. The subject is sufficient apology for the adoption of this treatment. But we have considered one of the chief attractions of the Speaker's Commentary to be the combination of the highest results of modern scholarship, with freedom from controversial ponderousness. The symplicity of its notes has even been a subject of criticism. There is no uncertain sound, however, on matters of faith; and questions of the time are uniformly met with practical, fearless candor, and as in morals, as strong in diction as in princiin a devout spirit. It is a commentary of rare force and dignity, and a worthy monument to the Anglican piety and scholarship of this gen- ashamed of her work. The unlovable character of Adams comes out strongly in these pages, and will help the present generation to understand something of the political bitterness which surtimes, it is refreshing to read of a public man, who did always what seemed to him simply and solely right, regardless of popular favor. Few men in our annals have enjoyed such general enmity as he. Mr. Morse's book is exceedingly readable; and, judged by this one, the series promises to achieve popularity.

MEN AND BOOKS, or Studies in Homiletics. Lectures introductory to the Theory of Preach ing. By Austin Phelps, D. D., late Bartlet Professor of Sacred Rhetoric in Andover Theological Seminary. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1882. 8 vo., cloth, pp. 354.

Professor Phelps' "Theory of Preaching' which appeared a few months since, receiving favorable comment in these columns, is properly the sequel-strange as it may sound-of the present volume. The two books bear a strong of lecture-room experience, and were drawn up on the eve of entering upon active life. In "Men and Books," the author considers the question of clerical usefulness, and its relation to the logical scholarship—a question that has puzzled many earnest minds. His conception of what constitutes the chief end and aim of the Ministry lies too exclusively, we think, in the direction of the pulpit; Sacramental and Pastoral duties being relatively ignored. This defect does not, however, obtrude itself objectionably. The two topics mentioned in the title are treated separately. The necessity and essential value of studying and understanding men, as well as books, is first considered; and we wish this half of the book, at least, might be universally read. The second half gives advice on the subject of by beginners in this branch of decorative art: books; how and what to read, and why. The work is strong, clear, sensible, and helpful to an unusual degree, and its conversational style ing manner. The chapters on the use of colors makes it attractive reading.

THE PROTAGORAS OF PLATO with an introduction and critical and explanatory notes. By E. G. Sihler, Ph. D. New York: Harper & Brothers. Chicago. Jansen, McClurg & Co.

CATHOLIC CONTROVERSY. A reply to Dr. Littledale's "Plain Reasons." By H. J. D. Ryder, of the Oratory. New York: The Catholic Publication Society Co.

Father Ryder is a member of one of England's noblest houses, and his answer to Dr. Littledale is distinguished both by courtesy and charity, qualities in which "Plain Reasons" is unfortunately very deficient. At the same time, we cannot see that, in the main points of the argument, the learned Oratorian has been as successful as is claimed by his friends. Dr. Littledale has the better cause, and could therefore have afforded to be moderate and temperate.

New York, E. & J. B. Young & ducted productive of great mischief to many. The first thing to be done is to take thought and council as to the advisability of having a Mission in a particular place or parish; and, when confident in favor of it, to obtain the consent (and in some cases the co-operation) of the Bishop. Then, you announce it in the church, print notices of it, headed with the words, "Under the sanction of the Bishop of——, a Mission will be held" etc., etc. The next step is to call together your lay-helpers of every kind, together with any earnest, spiritually-minded people you have in the Parish, and talk the matter over with them; ending with arranging for meetings to pray for the Mission, at long intervals at first, gradually becoming more frequent as the time draws near. At the same time, you organize a band of Mission-workers, whose duty will be to go into every house in the parish (two and two if possible), with a printed notice of the Mission, and a statement of its objects, and to get into conversation about it with every one they see; to bear it on their minds and hearts as the one thing for which they live, for the time being. Then an interest is awakened, and expectation of blessing is aroused. Before all this, of course, you will secured your Missioner, who should, if possible, be a man of experience in the work. and good at extempore speaking. Then, arrangements should be made, if practicable, for holding Services in some factories or workshops, which can often be done, if the good of souls be made the aim, and not the increase of membership of the Episcopal Church. This, however, is an accompaniment of the Mission, the object of which is to quicken your Church members, and to deepen the spiritual life in those who are already devout and earnest.

It is well, if possible, to have a meeting some months or so beforehand, and get the Bishop or some experienced Priest to give an Address upon the subject, stirring up interest, and drawing the various workers together. You will see that this implies long preparation, without which little good can be expected. I would not undertake to conduct a Mission where three months at least had not been spent in active and diligent preparation; and six months would be better still. Then, a Mission, if it be of really permanent good, means great increase of work for the Parish Priest. New converts must be watched over and provided for; classes for the further instruction of the eager to be taught must be set on foot; employment of various, kinds be found for those who volunteer to work for Christ; and generally, the whole ma-chinery of the Parish be overhauled.

A Mission should begin with the workers on Saturday evening, and continue to the evening of the following Sunday week; and there should be addresses to men only, women only, mothers, workers, Communicants, District, and sick visilished first in 1853, it has been for some years tors, etc., etc.

He had travelled abroad, but is now travelling on foot, boring men for pennies enough to buy a drink of grog, and offering to make portraits for $2 each.

A writer who visited Darwin some years ago says: "A place of great recreation for him was his conservatory, with an outlying series of hothouses. In most of them there were no flowers, but everything was of the moss order. At my last visit, he was absorbingly interested in the experiment of planting a shrub with the top down and roots up, to further illustrate his theory of 'reverse growth.' Long before, he had the branch of a peculiar tree put with its leaf-end into the ground and top root rising as the highest bough, and curiously enough he succeeded in perpetuating life, showing, as he philosophized, that light and heat and warmth are the essential conditions of growth."

The Indian Question.

In a journey through Montana, a few years ago, the writer made the acquaintance of an honest old soldier who had served in the U.S. army on the frontier, for more than twenty years. As we jolted along at break-neck speed in the "jerky," we passed a company of mounted Indians-a dreary cavalcade, composed of villainous looking men and dirty squaws and children. In answer to the question, "What is your opinion of Indians?" the old soldier said: "I have seen many good Indians, but—they were all dead!" Of course, some allowance must be made for the circumstances under which opinions were formed in this case. The speaker had met the Indians, for the most part, as enemies, and had seen them at their worst. From his experience, it is not to be inferred that the Indian is incapable of improvement, or utterly wanting in every quality that mankind respects. His opinion, however, is shared by all who have lived upon the frontier, where civilization and savagery have met; and the very general opinion prevails among in the Church?" Certainly. But in considering this class, that the Indians of our western country are, as a rule, degraded, lazy, treacherous, and cruel. That they might be educated to a better | fect will my removal have on the parish here, state, and that they ought to be, we may admit. In all efforts for their improvement it is well to know the worst, and to be prepared to take them

A remarkable paper has just been published upon the Indian Question, from the pen of Capt. E. Butler, of the Fifth U. S. Infantry. This essay is pronounced, by the Board of Award of the Military Service Institution, as "evidently the fruit of careful, thorough, and accurate historical research," and has been awarded a prize as "especially meritorious." The writer of this essay traces the whole course of our dealings with the Indian tribes, and shows that many popular ideas on the subject, are delusions, utterly unfounded in fact. He shows that, as a matter of history the Indians have been, from the first, rapacious, treacherous, and bloodthirsty, not only towards the whites but also among themselves; and that their claim to territory was one simply of conquest, and without the slightest pretence of use and improvement. "It is doubtful," he says, "whether, at the time of settlement, a single Indian tribe was living on territory which it could justly claim as its own country. The history of the aborgines, in their transactions with each other, is a frightful record of cruelty, robbery, treachery and blood. The most unrelenting and destructive enemies of the Indians have been the Indians themselves."

As a matter of history, the Indians were the implacable foes of the Colonists, during the Revolution and the second war with England, and in the Civil War one of the most horrible chapters was the Minnesota massacre of 1862. Over and over again the most powerful tribes have he has a wife and children, he loves them and made war on the Government, forfeiting all ought to be mindful of them. Said an Apostle, claims under previous treaties, and as often "If any man provide not for his own, and espec have they been reinstated in all their special privileges and claims. They have been recognized as quasi-independent nationalities, capable of treating and being treated with, and as holding a proprietorship in land from which they had driven or exterminated weaker tribes. Reduced to subjection many times, and paid for what they did not own, they have retaliated by perfidy and butchery of defenceless women and children. Captain Butler says: "History records no other instance in which the vanquished were treated with such magnanimity by the victors."

The great mistake of the Government has been in allowing to continue the tribal relation, and in dealing with the Indians through this, instead of dealing with them as individuals, amenable to the laws that are provided for other men. This is now coming to be generally admitted, and the government is slowly moving to this position. When it takes a stand squarely on this, there will be the beginning of the end to our Indian troubles. It will put an end to the aristocracy of barbarism, the chieftainship, which exalts itself by the degradation of the masses; and it will leave the Medicine-man without an occupation, who now grows fat by fomenting discord. It will give the Indian protection as well as restraint, and make it possible for him to follow a civilized life by giving him the rights of a man.

"No plan for the civilization of the Indians can be successful," says the author, "that does not contemplate their absorption into the general body of citizens, by individual proprietorship and responsibility, by the abolition of tribal entity and the extension over the red man of the same laws that govern other citizens."

The work is one that lies at our door, and cannot be entered upon too soon. It must be conducted sensibly and not sentimentally. We must face the fact that the wild Indian of to-day is essentially what his ancestors were three hundred years ago; indeed, it is to be feared that he great many other unwise men have said. Who is worse. "The civilization of the adult Indian that knows anything of the thought and speech of the present day is a hopeless matter," says of sectaries for the last three hundred years, feel that crime is dangerous and that peace and and spiritual? And the result is known of all made to wear clothes and use soap. They may Ingersoll and Mr. Milne.

not grow up, in the first generation, to be model Christians, but they can be made to regard themselves as citizens, and that will be a great gain. If we hand down this legacy of unwashed barbarism to the next generation, the blood of their brutality will be upon our heads. By our Indian Missions it has been demonstrated that even grown-up savages may be reclaimed, if they are only dealt with on Christian principles and protected from degrading influences.

A Comparison.

In a communication which appeared in a recent number of the LIVING CHURCH, an earnest

When a strong man is "called" to a field of duty in the Church, many times he says-I will consider it. When our sons in the Army and Navy are ordered to duty, they go, even to death, because they were sent. If one brigade or ship annot win a battle, down they go, and others

"When a strong man is 'called' to a field of duty in the Church, many times he says-I will consider it." Certainly. Why not? What else should he do? He will consider who has "called" him. If God calls, then he can only obey the call. But how is he to know that God has called? By considering it. Ordinarily, that is the way a man will find out what seems to be the leading of his Lord. "A strong man (say a banker or a lawyer) is called to a field of duty in the Church, many times he says-I will consider it." Certainly. That is what we should expect him to do. When the Christian banker or lawyer has an offer to go here or there, is it not to "a field of duty it, how often does he consider it in relation to the Church? How often does he say, "What efwhere God has put me?" How often does he say, "Can I do more for God and His Church elsewhere?" How often does the thought of this so much as occur to the layman when "called" here or there? And then our good friend goes on to say, "When our sons in the Army and Navy are ordered to duty, they go, even to death, because they are sent."

True enough, and yet very misleading. The Captain at Fort Concho has the very same pay and rank that the Captain at Fortress Monroe has. Does the Rector of St. John's-in the-Wilderness rank with the Rector of Nicodemus' Church in that great city by the sea? He certainly does not. Does he have the same income? Certainly not. And then the army officer at Fort Concho does not stay there forever. The Captain who has had a good appointment for two or three years near Washington, has to take his turn at the frontier. And he does not go to and fro at his own costs either. And then if disabled from accident or exposure while on duty in the service of his country, he is retired on half-pay. Or if he dies on the battle-field, or from disease contracted in the service, his widow will have a pension for life, which descends to her minor children in case of her death. Let the Rector of every parish have really the same status that every other Rector has; let them have the same official position and privileges, and then it will be time to compare them to "our sons in the Army and Navy." It is never wise to ignore the fact that the clergyman is a man, and was a man before he was a clergy-man, and is still. He gets hungry as quickly as any one else. If ially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel,"—and no exception is made in the case of the clergy. Said an Apostle, "We also are men of like passions with you." It is never well to forget it. Directly and indirectly it has to do with many a serious question of to-day. It is high time that the Church be reminded, and that in a forcible way, that the clergyman is a man.

The Chicago Times cannot understand why a man should "get religion" without setting up for a preacher, and seems to think that Christian work consists in perpetual preachments-babblement and nothing but babblement! What is the use of "getting religion" unless it can be put on exhibition? What other evidence is there indeed, that a man has it at all? How is the world to know that he has repented, unless he begins to reprove, rebuke, and exhort? What is the use of a bright experience unless a doting company can see how bright it is? How can a convert have humility unless he stands out before a crowd and tells them how good he is now, and how bad he used to be? Is it true, as the Times would seem to imply, that the poor can be converted only by slang and rude speech and bad grammar? Was that the secret of Wesley's power? Must the man who would do a Christian work among the poor be coarse and irreverent? The writer of this thinks not. He has a good deal to do with the poor, and knows something about work among them from experience. But the Times is indignant because we intimate that the raw convert is not best fitted for this work.

"The general impression of the difference between a living Church and a dying Church is the relative importance assigned by each to substance and shadow; to the principles of Christianity, and the forms in which they are presented."

Yes, that is what the old Puritans said, and what their children have said. That was what Fox and his Quakers used to say. It is what a Capt. Butler. From an occasional Correspondent.

In complying with your request to give the readers of the LIVING CHURCH some account of our late Convention, I shall confine myself to such results as are of general interest, omitting all business routine, which has been sufficiently reported in your summary of proceedings. And first of all—a word about the opening Service. Is it not strange that the whole body of clergy should not attend in their proper dress-the surplice- and thus give due dignity to what ought to be a great occasion, the first Service, on the assembling of a Church Council? The absence of any such accessories is the more noticeable. because our brethren of the Diocese of Easton, across the Bay, are requested to bring their surplices with them for the opening Service of their Convention, which assembles this very day (June 7th). How helpful and inspiring would be a solemn, hearty, dignified (yet not "ritualistic") Service, participated in by the whole body of delegates, clerical and lay! A great opportunity is lost, when this is not carefully attended to.

The Sermon, by the Rev. John W. Nott, deserves special mention, for its unusual thoughtfulness, and the entire absence of everything of a partisan character. It was refreshing to be lifted, for awhile, above the controversies which have too much engrossed Churchmen of this Diocese for the past two years.

Some idea of the state of feeling under which the Convention assembled may be gained from the following list of pamphlets &c., some of which were published only two or three days before the Convention met. (1.) "A Plea for Liberty of Dehate"-a sort of review of the Convention of 1880, by the Rev. Hall Harrison. (2.) "Liberty of Debate as Regulated by Law." by the Rev. J. H. Elliott, of the Standing Committeebeing a reply to Mr. Harrison-in which Dr. Elliott maintained that appeals were not debatable in Maryland, and ought to be at once laid on the table! (3.) Rejoinder of Mr. Harrison in the American Literary Churchman of May 24th. (4.) A second pamphlet of Dr. Elliott "On the Powers and Responsibilities of Standing Committees." (5) An Open Letter from the Rev. Wm. Paret, D. D., to the Rev. John H. Elliott, D. D. (6.) "Rough Notes on a Pamphlet by the Rev John H. Elliott, S. T. D.," by the Rev. Wm. Kirkus, M. A. LL. B., editor of The American Literary Churchman. (7.) "The Apology for the Action of the Standing Committee of Maryland, &c.," by the Rev. J. S. B. Hodges, D. D. (8.) "Reply to the Open Letter, &c.," by the Rev. John H. Elliott, D. D.

The last four pamphlets were written and issued with astonishing rapidity. No. 4 being published on Friday or Saturday, and the replies being ready for distribution on Tuesday evening; while Dr. Elliott's last (No. 8) was circulated in the Convention on Thursday morning. Nos. 5, 6, and 7, were rather crushing. A member of the Convention who enquired "Where shall I find Dr. Elliott?" received the reply: "All that is left of him will be found sitting in that pew yonder." Besides this, the extraordinary activity and French-art style and pungent satire of the editor of The American Literary Churchman which had remorselessly exposed the blunders of the Standing Committee, for the past few months, must not be lost sight of in estimating the situation. Under these circumstances it was, that the 99th Annual Convention of Maryland assembled in the City of Washington.

The first business was the election of a Secre-E. A. Dalrymple. Here, the party of the Standing Committee expected a contest. But it seems that they mistook the spirit of their opponents. The moment the Convention was ready for business, the Rev. Dr. Hodges, the leader of the opposition, rose and nominated the Standing Committee's candidate, Joseph Packard, Esq., a distinguished member of the Bar of Baltimore. and a known adherent of the "Evangelical" School. His fairness and clear-headedness and his previous service as Assistant Secretary, pointed him out as the proper man, while his courteous manners render him generally and deservedly popular. His election was unanimous: and this, perhaps, gave the key-note to the Convention, which was thoroughly good-tempered and pleasant. Nothing could exceed the cour tesy and gentleness of the venerable Bishop, nor could any exception be taken to his fairness and justice as presiding officer. On several trying occasions he preserved perfect composure, and never failed to exhibit to all who addressed him, an admirable and respectful consideration. This appears to be the universal opinion of the mem-

In the course of his Address, the Bishop gave his decided opinion that a church building was not a proper place for the debates and sessions of a Convention, and proposed that a suitable Hall should be erected for this purpose, in Baltimore. A Committee was appointed to attend to the business.

The first important matter was the Report of same peculiar style (invented, it is believed, by the Rev. T. Lewis) which has made the Standing Committee of Maryland so notoriously different from all other Standing Committees. Under the plea of not reporting "negative action," no mention whatever was made of their treatment of Mr. H. C. Bishop, which has been the burning question for the past year. It is strange that the Secretary could not see that this evasion suggests the suspicion that the Committee are ashamed of their conductor are afraid to meet any criticism upon their action. As soon as the Secretary had taken his seat, the Rev. Dr. Paret (Rector of the Church of Epiphany) arose, and in a clear, ringing voice, moved that the Re-Special Committee of three, to report the next ists," alone desired to be at least represented on ed except in this instance. Moreover, when he the reader must be reminded of the decision of Bishop Pinkney, which was accepted by the Convention of 1880, no debate being allowed on that occasion from an appeal which was taken by Mr. Bernard Carter. The decision, as reported at the time, was this: "The Standing Committee against whose action this Memorial is directed, is created by a Canon of the General Convention, over which this (Diocesan) Convention has no power; it is clothed with functions which this Convention cannot touch: it is called to exercise a discretion with which this Convention cannot interfere. I think, therefore, that the whole subject is out of order." The Convention of 1880 refused even to be respectfully memorialized on the action of the Standing Committee. The Convention of 1882 refers the report itself to a Special Committee, to consider it and report how the appointed duties have been performed. Mr. Montgomery Blair vainly endeavored to move a re-consideration; and the report of the Committee of Three was made the order of the day at 11 o'clock the next morning.

The next day, after several vexatious delays, the Report of the Special Committee of three was called for. The Committee consisted of the Rev. Dr. Paret, the Rev. Mr. Hyland, and Mr. Fendall Marbury. Standing Committee satisfactory, and they desired to be discharged. Dr. Paret presented a of the Standing Committee were found in a very unsatisfactory state, which by no means answered the requisitions of the Diocesan Canon which called for "a faithful record of all their proceedings;" it was, however, plain even from those imperfect records that the Standing Committee had had under consideration and had taken important action in the case of a candidate—by name Hutchings C. Bishop-of which no mention was made in the document read by the Secretary, which purported to be the Report to the Convention of the acts of the Standing Committee. This report of Dr. Paret was one of those able statements which prove the case by the clearness and accuracy with which the facts are recited and arranged. Here occurred the only blot upon the proceedings of the Conventionthe only instance of anything like the unfair management which has characterized the dominant party for the past few years. Mr. Fendall Marbury obtained the floor, and occupied all the remaining time in opposing the very mild resolutions with which Dr. Paret's report concluded. He gave vent to some wild nonsense, urging Churchmen to "shake hands over the bloody chasm, as opponents in the late Civil War had done," &c. The hour of 12 had now come, when, by the rules, the Standing Committee must be elected. Uprose Mr. Abert, fearless and independent as he always is, to say a word in behalf of fairness and generosity. "Mr. President," said be, "I move that the election of the Standing Committee be postponed for one hour, to enable this discussion to continue. I approve of the conduct of the Standing Committee in this matter, and I have no doubt it will be refor one hour.'

The Rev. Dr. Addison: "I object."

The Chair read from Cushing's Manual, and of Mr. Bishop. decided, since the Maryland Rules of Order made floor, to debate the appeal and to support the decision of the Chair.

peal debatable?" explained that he had asked the question in perfect friendliness, only to bring out a settlement of the important issue. The Bishop, with a pleasant smile, replied that he knew his reverend brother too well to suspect him of any other intention. Mr. Hyland continued the debate for a few moments, and then the appeal was withdrawn. Dr. Addison was urged by his own side to withdraw his objection, but he refused.

The vote for the Standing Committee was then taken, with the following result. Whole vote: Clergy, 120; laity, 116, total, 236. Necessary to Rev. Dr. Leeds (who had declined a re-election), the Standing Committee, read by the Secretary, 149; Rev. S. Gordon, 146; Rev. Dr. Stryker, the Rev. A. P. Stryker. It was prepared in the 139; Rev. D. Elliott, 136; Rev. Dr. Randolph, 133; Rev. Dr. Lewin, 133. [The last two received each 59 clerical, and 74 lay votes, neither being elected by the clergy; 61 being necessary to a choice. In Marvland, however, the Standboth orders.] The vote was a very large one. which Dr. Leeds received 180, and Dr. Lewin 134. In 1882. Dr. Lewin received 133 out of 226. shows a growing dissatisfaction with the course of the Standing Committee. More than this could not have been reasonably expected at this

The Late Maryland Convention. morning. The motion was carried by a clear the Standing Committee. They ought now to majority, without debate. To understand the feel that they are represented. Mr. Chew and full significance of this action of the Convention, Dr. Leeds spoke out on the floor in a way never heard before from them, in repudiation of the action of the majority of the Committee, which we now know, as we have always suspected, they have been opposing all along. The self-imposed rule of secrecy (which is no Canonical requirement) has subjected both of these gentlemen to serious misunderstanding. Yet, even this rule was not kept; for Dr. Campbell Fair is very intimate with the majority of the Committee, and he was told how the members voted, and told wrong. At any rate, this gentleman undertook to publish, in the LIVING CHURCH, a statement, now known to be erroneous: that the Standing Committee was unanimous in their action in the case of Mr. H. C. Bishop.

The next important business was a resolution by the Rev. Dr. Hodges, requiring the Standing Committee, in case of refusing to recommend any candidate, to give their reasons to the Bishop or to the applicant. Singular to say, the discussion which ensued was allowed, by general consent, to cover the whole question of "Ritualism."

Dr. Hodges began the debate in a long and able speech, in which he fully discussed the powers and duties of the Standing Committees. He was listened to with marked attention for upwards of an hour. He quoted long passages from a very strong pamphlet by Mr. S. P. Nash. majority report was read by Mr. Hyland. It of New York, which was published in 1875, with stated that they had found the report of the reference to the case of Dr. De Koven. Mr. Nash's pamphlet is a very able, close, and calm piece of reasoning-probably the most important minority report, which set forth that the minutes argument that has yet appeared on the true interpretation of the Canons of 1871. Mr. Nash maintains that Standing Committees consisting in most Dioceses of laymen as well as clergymen (and which might consist of laymen only), were never intended to be judges of soundness of the theological opinions of candidates-a delicate task which devolves upon examining chaplains and the Bishop. The haziness of thought which exists on this subject in the Maryland Convention, was well illustrated by a question put by Dr. Fair, which he seemed to think would break down Dr. Hodges' quotations from Mr. Nash. Interrupting the speaker, Dr. Fair said, "Will the reverend gentleman tell us where Mr. Nash got his theology, and who is to guarantee its soundness?"

> Dr. Hodges instantly replied: "There is no theology in his pamphlet; it is all law; it is the writing of a lawyer interpreting the law."

When Dr. Hodges had concluded, the Rev. Dr. Leeds took the floor, and made an eloquent and manly speech, which enchained the full attention of a crowded house, until he resumed his seat. His speech was of the nature of a personal explanation; and its general subject was the charges and misunderstandings which had grown out of his letter to the LIVING CHURCH, which letter had been called out by Dr. Campbell Fair's erroneous assertion that the Standing Committee had been unanimous in their action in the case of Mr. Bishop. Dr. Fair's assertion was erroneous, because, as we now know. Mr. Chew in all this action, dissented from his colleagues. As regards Dr. Leeds, it was a mischievous half-truth, for Dr. Leeds had voted for delaying action temporarily, for reasons which elected. But, sir, I contend that it is not fair entirely separated him from the majority of the that our side should occupy all the time on this Committee, to whom, along with Mr. Chew, he important question, and prevent the other side had always been opposed, endeavoring to secure from being heard. I move, then, that the elec- a just and kind administration of the law. The tion of the Standing Committee be postponed LIVING CHURCH, therefore, was quite justified in claiming Dr. Leeds as dissenting from the majority of the Standing Committee in the case

As to the rather unfortunate phrase employed no provision for suspending a rule, that the or- in his letter to the LIVING CHURCH, that he der could not be changed without general i.e. voted to delay the acceptance of the Candidate, unanimous consent. Mr. R. Barton, simply to to give a temporary rebuke to the clergy of Mt. test the sense of the House, appealed from this Calvary church, who had signed the Candidate's decision, and the Rev. Mr. Hyland took the papers, Dr. Leeds meant by this no sort of "ecclesiastical censure." He felt indignant, as many others felt, at Mt. Calvary Church, for needlessly, The Rev. He spoke of his peal in Maryland—as in other deliberative bodies efforts in years past, in Bishop Whittingham's -was debatable. This completely disposed of time, and during the rectorship of Mr. Paines the Rev. J. H, Elliott's recent pamphlet written predecessor (whom he would venture to call the to maintain the precise contrary. Dr. Addison holy and even sainted Richey), to secure a better understanding, and to keep down the prejudice against the Mt. Calvary Clergy. And yet, just as the case of H. C. Bishop came before the Standing Committee, a communication from one of the Mt. Calvary clergy appeared in the Southern Churchman, in which it was said that they were "accustomed to offer the Holy Sacrifice for the repose of the souls of the faithful departed." Such a statement, however reconcileable with the Prayer Book and with ancient teaching when properly explained and understood, was but too likely to be mistaken in the a choice, 119. The Rev. Mr. Chew received 229; popular mind for the Roman doctrine of requiem Masses; indeed the expression "as a requiem" had been used by the same clergyman in a former publication.

Under these circumstances, Dr. Leeds, it seems, felt (and here few would differ from him) that such wanton inconsideration deserves the rebuke and disapproval of conservative Churching Committee is chosen by a joint ballot of men. He thought (perhaps wrongly) that a Standing Committee might well pause before In 1881, the whole number cast was 196, of they accepted any candidate on such recommendations; but he never meant to pronounce, in this indirect way, anything like formal "ecclewhile Mr. Chew-the most decided opponent of siastical censure." Dr. Leeds was understood Dr. Lewin's policy-received 229 votes. This to say or to imply that fuller consideration had made him see more clearly the difficulty of rejecting any testimonials, unless the Committee were prepared to go to the length of bringing Convention. The minority, which includes the signers of such testimonials to trial-a view clergy and laity of all Schools, and not "ritual- of the Canon, upon which he had uniformly act-was Secretary of the Standing Committee, he had always given satisfactory reasons for non-action, to anxious candidates; he had never been willing to keep them waiting in suspense. Some of his colleagues had objected. "Turn me out of the Secretaryship," was his reply, "I cannot act in a manner which seems to me unkind and unjust." Without, of course, mentioning the present Secretary (Dr. Stryker, who is believed to be controlled by Dr. Lewin), Dr. Leeds' speech amounted to a strong condemnation of that want of courtesy, that system of cruel snubs and rebuffs, which have contributed so largely to cause and keep up the wounded feeling and irritation which have prevailed. This is one of the causes, which (as in Mr. Green's case in England) have brought all the "Broad" and not a few of the "Low" Churchmen to stand side by side with the ritualists, in their struggle for justice and fair play. Dr. Leeds announced his intention of voting for the resolution of Dr. Hodges; and, such was the impression produced by his speech, that if the session had not been held in a church-building, cheers of approval would doubtless have been heard all over the house, to indicate the full belief of the members in his perfect sincerity, and their satisfaction, if not with his entire action, with his vindication of his course in a difficult and much-disputed case, under a Canon of confessedly obscure interpretation. It is perhaps proper to add, that I am giving my own impressions of what I saw and heard, for which I alone am responsible; I have had no communication whatever with Dr. Leeds himself, who is absolutely ignorant of the manner in which I have represented the debate in which he took so interesting a part.

The Rev. Mr. Grammer followed in one of those humorous, kindly, rambling speeches, for which the rector of St. Peter's, Baltimore, has acquired a sort of celebrity in the Maryland Convention. His remarks were not unfrequently inconsistent, but consistency in such matters is not a jewel which the doctor prizes very highly. His present object was not to argue logically, but to amuse; and the whole Convention was delighted to ramble over the subject with him. He denounced "ritualism," as he was bound to do, and displayed his Protestant colors; but every one felt that the poor erring ritualist | LETTERS OF CREDIT would be pretty safe in the hands of so genial and generous an inquisitor as the Rev. Julius E.

Soon after this, the Convention adjourned until 8 P. M. We must follow its good example, and postpone the continuance of this long letter until the next issue of your paper. June 7th, 1882.

Obituary.

At a meeting of the vestry of Trinity Episcopal Church, Chicago, held Wednesday, June 7th, the following resolutions were adopted:

Church, Chicago, held Wednesday, June 7th, the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, William H. Adams, Senior Warden of Trinity Church died suddenly June 6th,

Resolved, That in his death we have suffered a loss that seems irreparable. He was one of the founders of the parish, and during the thirty-seven years of its existence had been regular, faithful and eminent in his devotion to all its worship and work. Never absent from its sessions, except when out of the city or kept at home by sickness, foremost among its members in generosity, giving always more than his tithe, a fast friend, a prudent counsellor, a ready helper, a Churchman whose life confirmed his creed, and an example of quiet, holy Christian character to all who know him. His death is a bereavement to the whole Parish, by which it will be deeply mourned.

Resolved, That in token of this mourning, we will as a body attend his funeral and that the church be draped in black for one month.

Resolved, That in behalf of the Parish we tender to his family its profound sympathy in their distress and pray that God's grace may enable them to be it the heavy burden His Providence had laid upon their hearts.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in

"It is manifestly absurd to think that the very best use of the Bible can be made by those who read it for the nourishment of their religious life, so long as the history of the revelations which it contains is imperfectly understood. In the interest of religions as well as of sound knowledge, it is of the highest importance that everything which scholarship has to tell about the Old and New Testament should be plainly and fully set before the intelligent Bible reader."—From the Preface.

"It is not every Professor of Hebrew whose ac "It is not every Professor of Hebrew whose academical lectures would furnish forth such a rich feas: as now lies before us. Even the happy few who know something of the facts of the Bible will learn much from the felleitousness of the present exposition. For Mr. Robertson Smith is not only a 'full man,' but has a singular gift of making a hard subject intelligible...... He loves to blow away the mists of controversy and show the truth in all its attractive simplicity."—The Academy.

To this the Professor made no reply. We sat a few moments in silence. Then he said: "How did you arrive at your belief in this narrative? You certainly certain as the truth of the sciences which did not start with it. What course did verified it; that its order was correct, was you pursue?" No; I replied, I did not equally beyond question; that it was not start with it, for when I began to study an allegory was evident, for there by its this chapter, I had no clearly formed side was a physical fact for each sentence. opinions about it, except that if it was from God it would bear comparison with fessor, "how you came to be so decided the most advanced science, so far as the in your belief. But with the experience two treated of the same subjects, or, as Dr. Draper so admirably puts it, in his Intellectual Developement of Europe, "Considering the asserted origin of this book" —he is speaking of the Koran, but his words apply equally well to any book claiming to be a revelation - "indirectly from God Himself—we might justly expect that it would bear to be tried by any standard that man can apply, and vindicate its truth and excellence in the ordeal of human criticism. * * * As years pass on, and human science becomes more exact, and more comprehensive, its conclusions must be found in unison therewith. When occasion arises, it should furnish us at least the foreshadowing of the great truths discovered by astronomy and geology, not offering for them the wild fictions of earlier ages, inventions of the infancy of man."

It makes no difference that Dr. Draper thought he was setting so high a standard that it would render the claims of the Bible ridiculous. I thank him that he has done so, and trust that he and his co-believers will say no more about the absurdity of looking in what claims to be a revelation for the foreshadowing of the great truths discovered by astronomy and geology. According to him, such looking for scientific truths is the proper mode of testing such a claim.

Here, too, I would remark, that these high demands of the learned Doctor absolutely require the Bible, if it really be a revelation, to disagree with the conclusions of science through all of what may be called its formative stages, hence, to disagree with the science of the world almost to the presday; and where science is yet formativeand consequently, of necessity, largely erroneous-we must, on Dr. Draper's show ing, still look for disagreement. I need hardly say that the history of the past shows a refusal on the part of the Bible to agree with the current "science," and this, to my mind, is no small argument in favor of its superhuman origin.

But, to return to your question; heartily agreeing with Dr. Draper as to what a revealed cosmogony would do, I concluded to see how far the one which we have been discussing, would bear his test. I determined to drop all a priori notions as to what a revelation would, or would not do. All theories, thus far, had proceeded upon the assumption that there was some great defect, or impassable limit, either in the knowledge of the writer, or in his fear of going beyond the capacity of his countrymen. I have already pointed out the broadness of the claim to universal creatorship here put forth. It shows iself all through the chapter, but perhaps more noticeably in the several cases where the account of God's work is broader than the fiat which it follows, as in the case of the water and land animals.

Truth is not in Numbers.

From Bishop Whitehead's Convention Address, 1882.

If we have studied Scripture history and ecclesiastical History to any purpose, we have learned not to despise the day of small things, far as you can judge, was the purpose of its mission of the Church in any age, has not been to out-number those who differ, but to make haste slowly, and to be content with the high commis-I think I can see several purposes. In the face of a foolish and useless sectism, in the face of materialism and unbelief, in the face of worldliness origin of that Book of which it is the both of business and pleasure, she has a message to deliver given her of God. And she has a great advantage in that her message is the old one, unchanged from the beginning, and unchangeable in all changes and chances of this mortal life; in that she holds to the Apostolic Faith, and to the Apostolic Order; and in that her methods are not only Scriptural but reasonable, and commend themselves to the thoughtful and sober-minded who are providentially led to consider them. We have for our comfort and encouragement the fact asserted in history and in God's word, that Truth progresses slowly while Error grows apace. It is one of the tokens that the Church is right, this quiet, tardy increase in the face of the rapid advance of all sorts of half faiths or speculative isms and beliefs. Would that all the clergy and people of for the reason assigned in the fourth com- this Diocese might take as the incentive for their Commandment, the worship of false gods work, as the purpose of their labors, that motto, so significant and so grand, --- "That Thy God's personality shows itself in such power, Thy glory, and the mightiness of Thy Kingdom might be known unto men." "In His Name," let us set up our banner, and be content if He permit us simply to "bear witness unto thought wrought into the story, that it the Truth." Whether we increase rapidly or not, is not our responsibility. But to be loyal to the ancient Creeds, to be loyal to primitive practice, to be true to the historic truth, "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief Corner Stone," this is to be successful, though we number but handful.

> The Gospel with which too many appear conent is a vague sentimental spiritualism, refusing all distinctness and solidity; subjective in its very root and essence; adopting some Christian phrases for their beauty, and setting aside their true significance; keeping at arm's length, so to say, not only Church and Sacraments, but an historic belief and a supernatural revelation.

This unsubstantial pietism is, in some men's fancy, the religion which can expect to live. But this, when tested, perhaps by deeper doubtings, at any rate by the realities of life—this, when the hour of death awakens, as one out of sleep, the dread of judgment—what is it but a staff that pierces the hand, a wall that falls in the overflowing shower, an idol that perishes in the time of visitation? Advice to a Young Clergyman. By an Elder.

(No. 1 of this Series appeared in issue of June, 3d, No. 187.) III.

Your manner in the chancel, while it is of no consequence whatever, with reference to yourself as a steward of the mysteries of God, is of some importance to the people, and is chiefly to be considered, as affecting their opinions of yourself. My first suggestion is, that you should not be particular about a clean surplice. It is a small mind that concerns itself about such trifles. only the mint, anise, and cummin of the law. If you have a ragged stole, wear it. The impression is more favorable if it be worn one-sided. All appearance of attention to ecclesiastical millinery, is to be religiously avoided.

Your entrance into the chancel should be made in a business-like way, something as though you were going to make a political speech. If you stride in vigorously and look around with an air the congregation, concentrate their minds upon their devotions, and demonstrate that you are master of the situation. You should always begin the Service in your loudest tone, and it is all clergyman who cannot out-voice the auctioneers and stump-speakers of the town, will hardly be respected. Besides, there are some people in hard of hearing, and you must read so that they can hear, regardless of all the others.

In reading the psalms, it is a good plan to begin your verse a whole sentence before the congregation have finished theirs. It makes the Service lively, and shortens it about one minute. Besides, it stimulates the people to read fast, and compels the slow readers to stop reading altogether, which is a great gain. If it should be supposed Moses referred to events which the bad habit of your congregation to chant the psalter, you may not be able to control the rendering of it so completely. You can only impress upon the choir that they should not pronounce any of the syllables distinctly, and caution the

If you join at all in the singing, do it by fits the "Gloria," for example, sing "As it was in the beginning," and then appear to forget what you are about, and go to turning the leaves of your separate statements so joined, and to place Prayer Book. To be sure, if the choir and congregation should follow this plan, it would produce a scene of ridiculous irreverence; but you are not to be guided by the rules that govern ordinary people.

Always start to find the lessons while the last "Gloria" is sung. It diverts the attention of the congregation, and reminds them that they are nearly through. It also impresses them with the fact that your turn is coming. It is not well to know exactly what the lessons are, or where they are. An impressive turning of the leaves of the Bible, and a consultation of the Calendar, at this point, will not be lost on the congregation. It increases their reverence and stimulates their curiosity. Lessons that are easily found little wisdom the world is governed." Mackinare not likely to be edifying.

While saying the Creed, is a good time to arsive. By this means, you will be able to demonstrate that "our Church is not formal."

Avoid the appearance of solemnity when conducting the Altar Service. The more you can disregard the Altar, the more you will honor the Gift that sanctifies the Altar. It is important to teach the people that we have no priesthood and that each of the four should own a particular no Altar, in the Christian Church, though St. leg of the cat; and each adorned with beads and Paul, in a figure, teaches that we have. It is better to be on the safe (popular) side, than to be with St. Paul. To turn to the Altar signifies that you are worshipping with the people, not for them. Avoid it, by all means.

The announcing of the Hymns is a very important part of the exercises; you should make it as impressive as possible. Some clergymen give out the number only twice, but a third announcement is desirable. If you are not too tired, four times would be better. People form habit of listening to what you say when you say it only once, and this a very bad habit. The reading of the whole hymn should never be dispensed with, especially if you have taken lessons in elocution. If you think it takes too much time to read the whole hymn, read one verse: even two lines would be a great favor to the congregation, and the choir will sing so much better if you give them this little send off.

While the hymns are sung, it is well to sit down. It shows that you have no interest in the performance, and it will encourage the congregation to do the same. At least, it will impress them with the importance of the work you have done, and excite their sympathy for your fatigue. Any attitude will do, at this time, if it only indicates carelessness and indifference. Sit crosslegged, and be at ease. Your position during the prayers, I had forgotten to say, should be free from all "formality." Perfect abandon is desirable. Kneeling is required by the rubric, but there is a difference in kneeling. This you will discover by experiment, and by a variety of positions will impress the people. You can, at least, put your elbows on the rail before which night, nor do we know now any one who has any you kneel, and support your head gracefully by more experience than we have. We should imleast, put your elbows on the rail before which one or both hands. It will give you quite an æsthetic appearance which the ladies will ad-made, for aiding you in the performance of your sacred duties, but these must suffice for this time. Only bear in mind that we have no priesthood and no Altar, and you cannot go far astray.

The new Bishop of Algoma.

To the Editor of the Living Church: Reference was recently made in the LIVING CHURCH to the Rev. Dr. Sullivan's election to the Diocese of Algoma.

When rector of Trinity Church, Chicago, Dr. Sullivan made many friends among the Better appear indifferent to "externals;" they are clergy and laity of Illinois, who will be glad to know something as to the nature of his work as Bishop of Algoma. We feel sure that Dr. Sullivan would have no objection to our quoting, from a friendly letter to the writer of this article, a brief account of the Diocese of Algoma. He

As for the scene of my future work, just take the district running all along Lake Huron, from the extreme eastern point of the Georgian Bay, up northwest, taking in the Manitoulin Islands by the way, continuing your survey till you have gone two-thirds of the way along Lake Superior, as far as Thunder Bay, and Prince Arthur's Landing; and, in that tract, you find my compact little Diocese, 800 miles long by from 100 to 200 broad! Population about 75,000, of whom summer, will be at Sault St. Marie, head of Lake Huron; and for the winter—possibly—Toronto, being a point from which I can easily reach and traverse the Eastern Section. There are the congregation, perhaps in the vestry, who are only 15 clergy in all the place, 40 churches, and 90 congregations. It is purely missionary as yet, sustained by grants from one or two of the Societies in England, and by voluntary contributions from Canada.

The new Bishop of Algoma will always find a warm welcome in this city and diocese. Many an American friend will no doubt think of him and his "journeyings often" among the beautiful islands of Georgian Bay, and along the north shore of Lake Superior, when praying for those who "travel by land or by water."

A Funny Legal Decision.

Four men, partners in business, bought some cotton bales. That the rats might not destrov the cotton, they purchased a cat. They agreed other ornaments the leg thus apportioned to him. The cat, by an accident, injured one of its legs. The owner of that member wound about it a rag soaked in oil. The cat going too near the fire set the rag on fire, and being in great pain, rushed in among the cotton bales where she was accustomed to hunt rats. The cotton thereby took fire and burned up. It was a total loss. The three other partners brought a suit to recover the value of the cotton, against the fourth partner who owned that particular leg of the cat. The judge examined the case and decided thus: "The leg that had the oil rag on it was hurt; the cat could not use that leg; in fact, it held up that leg, and ran with the other three legs. The three unhurt legs, therefore, carried the fire to the cotton, and are alone culpable. The injured leg is not to be blamed. The three partners who owned the three legs with which the cat ran to the cotton will pay the whole value of the bales to the partner who was the proprietor of the injured leg."—Ex.

An aged negro in Austin, Texas, known as Uncle Mose, prosecuted a vagabond for stealing his chickens. Now what would you say if I were to tell you that I have half-a-dozen of them in my back-yard at this very time?" "Well, boss," responded Uncle Mose, "I should say dat dat ar' tief had paid you yer fee with my chickens." That ended the cross-examination. -Texas Siftings.

Never blow down a lamp chimney. Granulated sugar will be found cheapest and best for general use.

IF YOUR FLAT-IRONS ARE ROUGH rub them with fine salt, and it will make them perfectly smooth.

ANTI-MICE REMEDY.—Camphor placed in drawers or trunks will prevent mice from doing the contents any injury.

TO IMPROVE PICKLES.-Pieces of horseradish added to the vinegar on pickles improves their flavor and prevents mould.

TO RESTORE RUSTY BLACK GOODS.-A teaspoonful of spirits of ammonia, added to the rinse water, will make rusty black goods look as good as new.

COCKROACHES can be destroyed by using smooth glazed china bowls, partially filled with molasses and water. Set the bowls against something by which the insects can get in; they will not be able to get out.

Bleeding at the nose may be stopped by simply laying a small roll of any soft substance, such as paper, between the gum and the upper lip, so as to press against the parts as tightly as possi-

CARE OF OIL-CLOTHS .- Oil-cloth requires careful treatment, and should never be scrubbed with a hard brush and soap, but after first being swept with the long-handled hair brushes that are made for the purpose, it should be carefully washed with a large, soft cloth, dipped into milk and water, half and half.

Mothers who were troubled—as most mothers were--to keep the boy's blouses in proper shape, last year, will find that to make them long enough to belt down is a great improvement. They look well, too. Elegant panels of velvet to hang between or under pictures are hand-painted or embroidered. A pair of these recently exhibited in an art store were decorated with morning glories and nasturtiums. Pretty panels of linen are ornamented in the same way. They should be fastened to rollers, just as the Japanese ones are. Much ingenuity may be displayed with good effect in the arrangement.

The following is said to be a cure for warts without leaving any scar: Take a small piece of raw beef; steep it all night in vinegar, cut as much from it as will cover the wart, and tie it on it; if the excrescence is on the forehead, fasten it on with strips of sticking plaster. It may be removed in the day and put on every night. In one fortnight, the wart will dry and peel off. The same prescription will cure corns.

COLD IN THE HEAD .- This can be cured at once, if taken care of at the very beginning. Dissolve a tablespoonful of borax in a pint of hot water; let it stand until it becomes tepid; snuff some up the nostrils two or three times during the day, or use the dry powdered borax will help me, who am not yet admitted into like snuff, taking a pinch as often as required. the number of His sons?" Quite inexpensive, but very charming little dresses can be made for little girls, by purchasing American surah, which can be had in all the delicate shades of baby blue, rose pink, cherry, or fawn color, and making perfectly plain prin cesse slips of this fabric, over which can be worn different dresses of dotted Swiss, mul, organdie, or batiste, trimmed with dainty ruffles of some fancy lace, and little bows of ribbon matching the shade of the slip. The American surahs are of good width, and are now reduced to about half their former price.

A friend tells us that a very appetizing dish may be prepared as follows: Place a layer of fair-skinned Baldwins—or any nice variety—in the stewpan, with about a quarter of an inch of Throw on about one-half cup of sugar to six good-sized apples, and boil until the apples are thoroughly cooked and the syrup nearly thick enough for jelly. After one trial, no one would, under any consideration, have fairskinned apples peeled. The skin contains a very large share of the jelly-making substance, and imparts a flavor not easy to obtain otherwise. He also says that a wise housekeeper, instead of throwing away the skins and cores of sound pie apples, would use them for jelly. A tumblerful of the richest sort can thus obtained from a dozen apples. Boil the skins, etc., a few minutes and strain. Add a little sugar to the liquid, and then boil until right to turn into the tumbler.

How to Cook Rice.—Rice is becoming a much more popular article of food than heretofore. It is frequently substituted for potatoes at the chief meal of the day, being more nutritious and much more readily digested. At its present cost, it is relatively cheaper than potatoes, oatmeal, or grain-grits of any kind. preparing it only just enough cold water should be poured on to prevent the rice from burning at the bottom of the pot, which should have a close-fitting cover, and with a moderate fire the rice is steamed rather than boiled until it is nearly done; then the cover is taken off, the surplus steam and moisture allowed to escape, and the rice turns out a mass of snow-white kernels, each separate from the other, and as mealy potato is superior to the water-soaked article. much superior to the usual soggy mass, as a fine

Rise up and set thy sad face hence.
Rise up and come where Freedom waits
Within these wide, white ocean gates
To give thee God's inheritance;
To bind thy woulds is this depart: bind thy wounds in this despair; To bind thy long, strong, loosened hair.

O Rachel, weeping where the flood
Of icy Volga grinds and flows
Against his banks of blood-red snows—
White bank made red with chil iren's blood—
Lift up thy head, be comforted;
For, as thou didst on manna feed,
When Russla roamed a bear in deed.
And on her own foul essence fed,
So shalt thou flourish as a tree
When Rusk and Cossack shall not be.

Then come where yellow harvests swell; Forsake the savage land of snows;
Forget the brutal Russian's blows;
And come where Kings of Conscience dwell.
O come, Rebecca at the well!
The voice of Rachel shall be sweet,
The Gleaner rest safe at the feet
Of one who loves her; and the spell
Of Peace that blesses Paradise
Shall kiss thy large and lonely eyes. Shall kiss thy large and lonely eyes.

JOAQUIN MIL ER, in the Independent.

The Cross of Constantine.

BY REV. J. M. NEALE, D. D.

It was the noon of the day before that which was to decide the mastership of the world. The two Roman Emperors, Constantine and Maxentius, were at war: their armies were drawing near to each other, and it was soon to be seen who would be master of the West, and who an outcast and a fugitive.

Constantine was a believer in Christ; he was the first Roman Emperor that turned from the worship of idols to serve the True God. But he was not baptized, and, indeed, he knew very little about Christianity. Maxentius was a Pagan, and a fierce enemy of the people of God; and thus the approaching conflict seemed to be, not so much between the two earthly sovereigns, as between the Prince of the power of this world, and the Cross of Christ.

The Emperor Constantine had advanced almost to the gates of Rome; Maxentius intended to send forth his army to meet him, but himself to remain shut up in the city, because the oracles had said that it would be dangerous for him

Constantine looked long and earnestly on what the Roman poets delighted to call the Eternal City, and on his own men.

"It is even thus," said Constantine, "that many general has looked for the last time over his troops, who, the next evening, has been left to the kites, or, perhaps, been so far remembered as to be thrown into a hasty grave. They say, and I believe them, that the God of Christians has done wonders; but then He only stretches out His arm to those who have received Him by baptism. If He would, He could save me now. 'We know,' as the good old Bishop Cornelius was telling me the other day, 'that an idol is nothing in this world.' If Maxentius prospers, it will be by the aid of the One True God; and will He aid one who has been the enemy of His people? And yet what right have I to think He

As Constantine was thinking in this way, a bright light like a flash of lightning, made him look up. He saw before him, in the clear sky, prehended from the possible contamination of the metal by the presence of such foreign subin Greek letters, were the words "In this conquer." The Emperor was amazed beyond measfree from rust, tin vessels answer ordinary ure; he doubted his eyes; he looked around to see whether he saw other objects distinctly. Yes, there behind him, was the Roman Eagle; and right across the camp at the Decuman gate, he too thin-scatter powdered sugar over them, and | could see a party of soldiers going out to forage. His eyes were as clear as ever; he looked again, and still the cross blazed in the sky, and still victory was promised in it. But why in that shape? It was formed of two Greek letters, X and P, that is ch and r; and this you see are the two first letters of our Blessed Lord's name. This abbreviation, or, as we call it, monagram, was often employed by the Early Christians to signify Christ.

Constantine turned and went into his tent. Hour after hour passed away, and still he remained there, till at last his great officers began to wonder what was become of him. The præfect of the camp, who was the officer next under the Emperor, at length went to the door. and received permission to enter.

"You are come in happy time," said Constantine. "I have had a glorious vision from the God Whom you serve.'

"I rejoice with all my heart, to hear the Casar say so," replied Pomponius, himself a Christian; "but may I crave to know what sort it was, and when it appeared?"

Constantine told him; and then continued, 'Now listen to what I have determined, I will no longer use the Roman Eagle for my standard; this Cross shall be my banner instead. Send the principal smith to the principia, (that is, to the head-quarters of the camp). But stay; what is the hour?"

"About the twelfth," answered the præfect; 'the sun has set nearly half an hour."

"Then it is time," replied Constantine, "to give the watchword." And he took from one corner of his tent, a small square piece of wood, and wrote on it, in Latin, the words which, in Greek, had surrounded the miraculous Cross.

"The soldiers will marvel at so uncommon a watchword," remarked the præfect. "Is it your Majesty's will that the cause of it should be

It was about the same hour that Constantine, in his tent, was consulting the good Bishop the edge of the boat; he clings for his life; the Cornelius, receiving his advice, and calling him | water is swift, and his armour is heavy; he is to witness that, if he were successful, he would sucked under and disappears. establish the Church throughout his dominions: and that Maxentius, in his palace, was sitting triumph, under the protection of the victorious down to a royal banquet. I cannot describe to Cross. you the splendor of that feast. Two thousand choice fishes, and seven thousand birds of different kinds were served up; a multitude of slaves, brought from the furthest parts of the world, from Britain and India-from Mount Caucasus and Spain-waited, crowned with flowers; the dishes were brought to the sound of flutes; wines of all sorts were served up in flagons of gold; a huge dish of silver, called the shield of Minerva, was handed round to the guests, filled with the most costly meats, that each might take what he chose. The talk was such as Christians would shrink from hearing; until, as the night grew deep, there was nothing to be heard but drunken shoutings and mirth.

The next morning the rising sun showed the army of Constantine that the Eagle was gone, and a new standard was in its place. The Cross was at the top; under it were the images of Constantine and his two sons; and below these hung a purple banner, spangled with jewels, and by their gods that the fortune of Constantine says: was deserting him, and that the Roman Eagle of Maxentius would never be conquered by the sign of the Nazarene; the Christians thanked God and took courage.

It was a gallant sight, as, almost at the same moment, the army of Maxentins issued from the side the Eagle, on the other the Cross, rose above the inferior standards; and on each side there was a red streamer, which fluttered from a spear—the signal of immediate battle. You might see the soldiers making their wills; the centurions giving the banners to the bravest veterans; the watchword was given out, the trumpets blew together, the horns and clarions sounded, and messages were sent by horsemen from the general of each army to all parts of his legions. Maxentius, as I said, was not there in persons; but his præfect rode round the ranks, and exhorted his soldiers to fight for Jove of the Capitol, and the eternal fires of Vesta; the gods of their forefathers, their own hearths and altars. Constantine, who was mounted on a milk-white horse, gave the Cross, or, as it was called, labarum, to fifty veterans; and then reminding the Christians under Whose protection they fought, and the Pagans that the God Whom he himself

Only this was to be observed, that wherever, throughout the whole of that dreadful day, the Cross was borne, confusion and terror seized the troops of Maxentius. The veterans of his army made a furi- outside as of the retreat of an army with banners. ous attack upon it; and though many of the guards fell, the standard-bearer himself, the most furiously assaulted of all, remained unwounded. Arrows and lances flew off his armor just as hailstones leap from a high church roof, indeed, some said that they never touched it, but were warded off by an unseen hand. Old it, but were warded off by an unseen hand. Old Statius bore it well for many hours; at last he gave it to a comrade, and had no sooner done so, than a javelin pierced his corselet, and laid him than a javelin pierced his corselet, and laid him on the ground. The new standard-bearer, in his turn, seemed to become invulnerable.

Maxentius was exhibiting games in the circus, when news was brought that the day would be lost unless he put himself at the head of his troops; that a new standard carried confusion wherever it came, and that the gods themselves were fighting against him. He desired to hear what the oracles said: they assured him that the enemy of Rome should perish; and, encouraged by this prophecy, he galloped out at the head of a body of chosen horse. But, as he hurried along, horses without their riders tearing past him, flying soldiers, and here and there centurions, showed him which way the day was going. Still he pressed on; and by his great strength and courage had almost turned the fight. Constantine seeing that he was pressing hard a body of one of the most exposed legions, ordered the labarum to its aid, and, as if by magic, the veterans, who fought round the tyrant, fled. Maxentius was hurried on with them; the rout became general; the white horse of Constantine pressed them on one side, the labarum blazed on the other; and fearful havock was made in the fields that lay between the battle and the Tiber. There was a bridge of boats, which the flying troops must pass; the central ones were clamped with an iron hook, which could easily be loosed in case of need. But now-by what means I HOUSE FURNISHING GOODS. know not-it was unfastened. On came the troops, horse and foot, heavy and light armed, veterans and soldiers in their first campaign, Romans and allies; on they came along the treacherous bridge, pouring on it from the shore, urging the foremost forward, themselves urged on by the hindmost. And still there arose the shriek of those who were thrust over the end of the unfastened boat; hundreds dropped into the water, and from their heavy armour, sank like lead. It was in vain that those who saw their danger struggled and fought, and cried

"Back!" The troops behind, fearing nothing so much as their pursuers, still pressed onward, "You are right," replied the Emperor. "I will onward; Maxentius is carried along the bridge; he sees the danger; he commands the crowd on their allegiance, to turn; his voice is lost in the tumult; he is borne over the side; he grasps at

If we cultivate home friendships with the same assiduity that we give to those outside. they will yield us even richer and fairer returns. There is no friendship so pure and beautiful in its nature, so rich and full in its power of blessing, or so singularly rare in its occurrence; as that between parents and grown-up sons and daughters. When the parental and filial interests are supplemented by that higher and more spiritual affection that binds together minds in intellectual communion, and souls in heartfelt sympathy, few deeper or more delightful friendships can be imagined. A REAL SKIN CURE. There is only one

AND THAT WITH SIMPLE NAME. Beware of impostors, pirates, or any old articles which now suddenly claim to be best. They have been tried and found wanting, while this has been proved a remarkable success

NO POMPOUS NAME. This curative needs no pompous or incompre-hensible title of Greek or Latin to sustain it, but its simple English name appeals directly to the common-sense of the people. And the people are signally manifesting their appreciation of this frankness by selecting and using Dr. Benson's Skin Cure in preference to all other professed remedies

Dr. C. W. Benson has long been well known as a successful physician and surgeon and his life study has been the diseases of the nervous system and of the skin; since he has been persuaded to put his New Remedy and Favorite Prescription as a "Skin Cure" on the market, various things have sprung up into existence, or have woke up from the sleepy state in which they were before, and now claim to be The Great Skin Cures.

Beware of imitations, or the various articles which have been advertised for years or struggled along, having no real hold or merit on the public, that now endeavor to keep head above water by advertising themselves as "The Great Skin Cure." None is genuine and reliable, except Dr. C. W. Benson's Skin Cure. Each package and bottle bears his likeness. Internal and external remedy, two bottles in one package. Price $1.00, get at your druggists.

There was a serious outbreak in Alexandria on Sunday, which resulted in the wounding of sixty-seven Europeans. A conference of the great powers will be held to decide what had best be done with little, but/very troublesome Egypt.

The Rev. Dr. Sallivan, Bishop-elect of Algoma, is to be consecrated in Montreal on St. Peter's Day, June 29th. The sermon will be preached by the venerated Bishop of Western New York, who is as well known and as much esteemed in Canada as in this country.

One of the vacant seats in the French Academy has been filled by the election, by a majority of 23, of the Bishop of Autun, Dr. Perraud, an Oratorian, and a man of great polemical power. He was one of the first Bishops appointed by the Republic.

The Bishop of St. Albans recently admitted four ladies as sisters of a new community of the Name of Jesus, at Maplestead. These sisters make profession of poverty, chastity, and obedience, but these vows are revocable.

A rumor that the assassins of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke are in London has caused great excitement in the British Metropolis, and a dread, the like of which has not, within the memory of many people living, been experienced before, has fallen upon the polite world. Cabinet Ministers and the subordinate members of the Government are attended by escorts of police. Dynamite is suspected to lurk in every sack or basket. The principle on which the policy of assassination and explosion is conducted being as occult as are the societies that apply it, who shall predict what new shape of horror may not presently appear, or can boast that he himself is not the one whose life will next be sought?

Another tragedy took place in Ireland last week. Mr. Bourke, an unpopular landlord was shot dead: a soldier who was riding with him as escort was also killed. It would seem that there is a wide-spread conspiracy for the renewal on a large scale of agarian and political assassination.

The London World says: "The appointment of the Rev. Ernest Wilberforce to the newlymade Bishopric of Newcastle will give satisfaction in many quarters. He is a moderate High Churchman; he is very fluent and affable in his speech; he is a temperance light; and, besides all this, he is a great lawn-tennis player, which will be quite a new attribute in a bishop. What more suitable for the game of lawn-tennis than episcopal gaiters? I have never yet seen them used in active sports; but as Bishop Wilberforce is only about forty he will have a chance of testing their value. Mrs. Wilberforce, too, is just the person to lead Newcastle society, which, like that in most of our northern towns, has not yet been noted for its brilliancy."

Trinity-tide in New York.

Correspondence of the Living Church.

Trinity Sunday has come and gone, with its usual Ordination of deacons and priests. A number of the late graduating class at the General Theological Seminary were admitted to Holy Orders in old St. John's chapel, Varick St. At half-past ten o'clock the surpliced choir entered the church singing, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," followed by the candidates, and by the Bishop of New York, the clergy of St. John's, and a number of visiting clergy. The candidates arranged themselves in the front pews. The Rev. Dr. S. H. Weston, minister-in-charge of St. John's Chapel, preached the sermon, taking for his text 2 Tim. iv:5. "Make full proof of thy ministry." He enlarged upon the practical duties of the parish priest outside of his chancel, and laid stress on the preparation of candidates for Confirmation, the visiting of the sick and poor, and the training of children in Churchly ways through the systematic management of the details of Sunday-school work. The Bishop then proceeded with the Ordination Service, conferring the diaconate upon Messrs. A. Bannister, Phineas Duryea, B. S. Sanderson, E. B. Joyce, L. B. Thomas, J. W. Steele, Henry A. Adams, A. F. Tenney, W. D. Martin, W. S. Daw, J. O. Davis, F. Heartfield, and J. Maguire, and the priesthood upon the Rev. Messrs. J. B. Jennings, Thomas Duck, G. H. Moffat, L. H. Schwab, M. L. Woolsey, G. W. Browne, J. Owen Bache and G. S. Ayres. The candidates were presented by the Rev. Dr. Tuttle, the Rev. Prof. Oliver of the General Seminary, and the Rev. Messrs. Paine, Frisby, Cooke and Brown.

The litany was read by the Rev. W. H. Cooke, the Bishop acting as Celebrant in the Holy Communion, with the Rev. P. A. H. Brown as Epistoler, and the Rev. E. Heartfield, one of the newly ordained deacons, as Gospeller.

In St. Luke's, Brooklyn, the Bishop of Long Island ordained Mr. Henry S. Bonnell to the diaconate, and the Rev. Messrs. William Howland, Jr., and Ralph W. Kenyon to the priesthood. The Rector of the parish, the Rev. George R. Van DeWater preached the sermon.

The forces for the welfare of humanity were in the hands of those who had a sturdy, honest faith in the Deity and who were proud of being called to show it.

The City Mission of New York is contemplating with some alarm the near approach of summer. The season when wealthy and generous patrons are absent at the watering places, is a time of anxiety to all the city institutions. Despite increased giving before and after this period the unpaid bills accumulate, and not infrequently linger as a debt into the winter, coming over as an adverse balance sometimes even into the next year. The City Mission has already a small debt on its hands. Its ministration to the poor, at St. Barnabas' House, and to the inmates of the hospitals and reformatories has to go on in summer very much as at other periods of the year. And money is needed-money, and provisions, and clothes, and newspapers for hospital reading. During the last month the mission clergy have held 131 public, and 56 private Services, with an aggregate attendance of 8,943 persons; the Holy Communion has been administered to 157 persons; there have been 8 baptisms, and 10 burials. The Sunday-school of St. Barnabas numbers 89 children, the Day Nursery 45 infants daily, the day schools, 36 pupils; 117 families, and 4,813 persons have been visited by the Missionaries aided by the Sisters of the Good Shepherd; over 7,000 magazines and papers have been distributed among the sick, and 3,640 volumes withdrawn from the free circulating libraries in the institutions visited. At St. Barnabas House, 179 persons have been provided with lodgings, and 8,572 free meals given to the poor. With the rapid increase in the population of the city, the work of this Mission must need an ever increasing support. Few can appreciate the amount of sacrifice and selfdenial constantly entailed upou the workers, or the manifold opportunities for Christly deeds constantly calling to new effort.

The Commencement season brings some changes to Columbia College this year. Professor John Dillon has resigned the chair of Real Estate and Equity Jurisprudence in the Law School. A new Professor of Modern Language and Foreign Literature has been created, Prof. Charles Sprague Smith being elected to it. Dr. Hjalmar H. Boyesen succeeds Prof. Smith as Gebhard Professor of German, Spanish, and Italian. The trustees have decided that the Junior class must hereafter have an hour each week with the study of Anglo-Saxon, under Prof. C. P. G. Scott. Ninety-one students were examined for admission to the collegiate department, at the spring examinations. President Barnard's desire to admit ladies to the college classes has not met with favor from the governing Board, we understand, and old Columbia is likely to remain true to its conservative past in this respect. No little interest has been awakened by the agitation of the matter, however, and it is just possible that we have not yet heard the "last word."

The many friends of the Church German Society will learn with sorrow, that its indefatigable retirement from active duties. We learn that a return to his old home in Germany is contemplated, where he will have the advantage of quiet, and the loving care of members of his family.

Last week the stone cross on the steeple of the recently consecrated Trinity Church in the suburban borough of New Rochelle, was demolished by lighting during a thunder storm. No other damage was done the sacred edifice save the breaking of a few slates on the roof. Had the building been of other material than stone, and substantially constructed at that, a conflagration might not improbably have ensued—the accident having occurred at an early hour of the morning, before many persons were stirring.

Division of Dioceses.

To the Editor of the Living Church:

According to your North Carolina correspondent, affairs in Western Michigan are in a dismal condition. He says that the Bishop of North Carolina said that the Bishop of Michigan told him that "the Bishop, the clergy, and the people" (of Western Michigan,) "were all dismayed."

If the Bishop of Michigan ever expressed such an opinion, (more likely than not, he never did,) it would seem probable that he merely reflected the local sentiment around him. When the question of division was under debate in the un-In the evening of the same day, the Bishop of divided Diocese, the friends of division were assured by the opposition that it would prove a tered Confirmation at the church of St. Mary the great mistake to divide the Diocese-that we Virgin, New York. enough to suppose that we maintain our Diocesan position respectably. And, although it is unprofitable business to be "comparing ourselves among ourselves," yet we are willing to be compared with North Carolina, and even with Michigan. For, let any one consult the journals of 1881, and he will find that, in proportion to her numbers, Western Michigan gave more last year than either one of them.

Their total contributions were: Western Michgan, $69,588; North Carolina, $54,010; Michigan, $134,048. Yet North Carolina has more than twice the number of clergymen than Western Michigan has, and nearly twice as many communicants; while Michigan has considerably more than double the number of clergy, and very many more than double the number of commun-

A Suggestion for "Earnest Teacher."

In reply to the inquiry of "An Earnest Teacher." permit me to give an item from my own experience. The point of main importance, of course, is, to take a deep and abiding interest in each individual boy's welfare, both in and out of the Sunday School. And, in carrying this out, it will be found to be exceedingly helpful, to keep the boys employed as constantly as possible. Boys liked to be asked to do something; and, as a rule, when such a request is made, they comply very readily, and do their work well. Whenever it can be done, therefore, ask your boys to bring some part of the assigned lesson, in writing, or in a printing hand, if the pupils have not yet reached the writing period. The lesson is, of course, to be carefully adapted to the age and capacity of the pupils; and some directions should be given as to how the work is to be done. When the time arrives for handing in the work, be sure to make enquiry for each boy's performance; and let each one know your estimate of it. We are all aware how very discouraging it is to prepare a piece of writing by special request, and then have no notice taken of it.

Almost every Sunday School lesson will be found to contain something that may be written, and an occasional or even a frequent exercise of this kind may to do much towards creating and maintaining an interest in what might otherwise be most dull and wearisome. P. C. M. Waterville, N. Y.

Worthy of Mention.

We are always glad to note and mention the worthy achievements of personal enterprise, and we know of none more remarkable, in this city, than that attained by Dr. Peiro, whose skill in the treatment of catarrh, throat and lung diseases has obtained for him so wide a reputation.

The character of his patronage, the very elite of this and other cities, among them the most prominent speakers, ministers, and singers, is the evidence of his professional abilities. He is the only homeopathic physician in Chicago, who devotes his entire attention to that very important class of diseases.

In addition to his ample conveniences and appliances he has obtained a chemical laboratory for the exclusive generation of Compound Oxygen gas, that wonderful agent for the cure of throat and lung diseases. It is remarkable that in so large a city as Chicago there should exist no other physician's office where this great gent of nature is generated. By this means Dr. Peiro is enabled to administer the Compound Oxygen in its fresh and pure state daily. His offices continue, as for years past, at 83 Madison street (opposite McVicker's theater). Hours as usual, from 9 to 4. His assistants are also perons of proven merit.— Chicago Tribune.

Forty Years' Experience of an Old Nurse. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is the prescription of one of the best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and has been used for forty years with never-failing success by millions of mothers for their children. It relieves the child from pain cures dysentary and diarrheea, griping in the bowels, and wind-coilc. By giving health to the child it rests the mother. Price twenty-five cents a bottle.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholsomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powder. Sold only in ca Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

The Gentle Way is Best.—In dyspepsia, liver complaint, and constipation, the diseased organs are preternaturally sensitive and tender. Do not use them roughly. An alterative like Tarrant's Seltzer them roughly. An alterative like Tarrant's Selizer Aperient, that tones, corrects and purifies the system without unduly exciting or irritating either the stomach, the liver, or the bowels is the true specific in such cases. Reason teaches this, and experience confirms it. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
