ST. JAMES LESSONS

Our aim is to present material that will supply knowledge and history of the Church and a love of the Sacraments as practiced in the Episcopal faith.

The books are printed attractively, illustrated, and include well-executed hand work. Pages and type are large, clean and uncrowded; they cover 33 lessons plus suggested reviews. Based on the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer. The cost, by reason of generous subsidy and production in large quantity, has been kept within reach of all Churches and Missions. Following is the list of Courses:

MAN POWER

A column for laymen
By L. H. Bristol, Jr.

Problems in Buffalo

FOR three days this July the University of Buffalo was the scene of the Second Annual Creative Problem-Solving Institute. Some 350 men and women, representing many different business, professional, and military groups took part in a conference designed not to solve the problems presented at the various sessions, but aimed rather at teaching some of the group ideation techniques which have been receiving wide publicity of late and which are more and more being used by local church groups across the country. Much of the conference was devoted to training people in the Alex Osborn group technique for getting ideas, known as Brainstorming.

This technique, which has been described in THE LIVING CHURCH before (L. C., August 28, 1955), is based on the idea of suspending judgment when your group is trying to think up ideas. Criticism is withheld until a later session.

One practice brainstorm session was devoted to the question of how to make the people in homes for the aged happier, a question of real concern to churches in many areas. Here are a few of the 35 ideas which were suggested, some of them impractical, some of them quite usable. Perhaps they are ideas you could pass along:

1. Why not arrange courses in the cross-breeding of flowers for those interested in gardening? These "new" flower plants could be sold.
2. Why not organize a "think-up panel" at the home which would volunteer to try helping the local town council find new answers to pressing problems they might face?
3. Why not interest some of the old men in forming an inventors' club?
4. Why not set up a self-government system replete with even good spirited campaigning for office for the fun of it?
5. Why not develop a system for the exchange of ideas between different homes for the aged?

Another practice brainstorm session was held on juvenile delinquency. Rather than loud-pedal this question of delinquency and its control, your men's group might like to consider ways in which your parish could assume leadership among the churches in your community in toning down the sensationalism and attention given bad teenage behavior and helping to encourage law-abiding conduct. Your men's group would make up its own list, to be sure, but here as a "starter" are ideas:

1. Why not interest fellow churches in greater community-wide promotion of (a) Church youth and Scout groups, and (b) worship by the whole family together?
2. Why not interest local service clubs in offering good-driving awards to teen-agers?
3. Why not have an evening meeting of the Y.P.F. at which young people are invited to come up with suggestions for local police or town council members present on how they themselves could encourage good citizenship among teen-agers?

Group Ideation in Your Church

One of the values of the "free-wheeling" Brainstorming technique where even the wildest ideas are encouraged seems to be the way in which an impractical idea, suggested by Mr. Jones, may "trigger" in Mr. Brown a practical idea which might not otherwise have occurred to him.

When choosing your question to be discussed, it is important to make it specific, not overly general. Otherwise, you will "scatter your shots." For example, if you were a Prayer Book publisher, you would not want to brainstorm an overly general subject like "How can we promote our Prayer Book?" Actually, this represents two or three separate sub-problems and should be treated as such at several sessions—one to discuss how to promote the books to the trade, another to discuss how to promote them to the clergy, and still another perhaps to promote them to the general public.

Just this week, the Friends of Berkeley Divinity School met to brainstorm the question of how to interest more laymen in Berkeley. More and more religious groups are using Brainstorming. Such sessions have recently been held at Wainwright House (Rye, N. Y.), the Church of St. Joseph of Arimathea (Elmsford, N. Y.), the Laymen's Movement for a Christian World (New York), Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church (New York), Wyckoff (N. J.) Reformed Church, etc., etc.

For further information on these techniques which you could use in your church, write The Creative Education Foundation, 1614 Rand Building, Buffalo 3, N. Y.

Whether it be for finding new Every Member Canvass ideas, new program ideas for your men's group, or questions like "How can we best interest newcomers to town in our church?" these group techniques can be a real boon to a parish if given a fair try.

The Church School Picture

By Martha Prince

Many parents today are concerned about the crowded condition of the nation's schools. Whether Johnny can't read well, or whether he reads so much better than his classmates that he is bored with school, an overworked teacher may not be able to help him. Perhaps he has become involved in a social situation which is not conducive to study, or even one which encourages bad habits. Or parents may be concerned because religion in his life is a once-a-week affair. The answer to any of these problems may lie in a Church school.

Parents of moderate means who may never have considered a private school for their children because of cost might look into the possibility of winning a scholarship. Although full scholarships are rather rare, partial scholarships are to be found at most schools, and in some cases a high percentage of the student body attends on a scholarship basis.

The Episcopal Church has long been a leader in the field of education. Porter Sargent's Private Schools lists more boarding schools affiliated with the Episcopal Church than any other single Church. In quality as well as numbers, the Church's schools rate high. Some of the first schools were patterned on English models, although today's schools have been adapted to the American scene. The founder of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., encouraged the boys to play cricket, but it was soon replaced by baseball.

Besides the academic preparation for college, found in most private schools, Church schools offer an environment aimed at developing a Christian viewpoint and commitment. Enrollment is seldom, if ever, limited to Episcopal Church members, and the amount of religious study and worship varies widely from one school to another. But the Church school is able to bring religion into the daily lives of students in a way not permitted to public schools.

In late 1955 hundreds of representatives of schools and colleges met at Kent School, in Connecticut, for a seminar on "The Christian Idea of Education." They spent four days discussing the meaning of a Christian, rather than a generally religious, concept of education. This and other similar meetings show a renewed interest among school administrators and teachers in a dynamic Christian approach to the whole of education.

afternoon rehearsal of the chapel choir at the Choate School, Wallingford, Conn. At right, the crucifers and flag-bearers leave the chapel at St. Mary's Hall, Fairbault, Minn. Non-Episcopal students are sometimes allowed to attend other churches on Sunday. Courses on Christianity and the Bible may be required or voluntary.

The question of what makes a school a Church School may be difficult to answer, as relationships between Church and school vary greatly. About a dozen girls' schools and one or two boys' schools are operated by Episcopal religious orders. Below, a class at St. Hilda's School, New York City, is conducted by a nun of the Community of the Holy Spirit, which operates the school. Some schools are headed by priests of the Church. Many are owned by various dioceses of the Church, or groups of dioceses. Others, privately owned, are affiliated with the dioceses. About half of the dioceses of the Church have schools affiliated with them to some degree. Still other schools have no official Church connection, but have a vital Episcopal Church tradition. A school which has no official Church connection, or where attendance at daily chapel is not required, may, through the personal example of headmaster and staff, do as good a job in teaching and practicing Christianity as a more specifically Church-connected school.

A great variety of subjects are taught at Church schools. In most, the basis is the usual college preparatory curriculum. Other courses taught at one or more schools include Russian, Greek, comparative religions, navigation, business arithmetic, history of the Far East, international relations, radio, dramatics, and secretarial work. At St. John's Military School, Salina, Kan., a student may acquire an airplane pilot's license. For students not interested in attending college a general course is provided in many schools. At left, a boy at Greer School, Millbrook, N. Y., learns to operate a power saw. Greer school, a coeducational school for children aged six to 18 from broken homes, specializes in on-the-job vocational training. Remedial reading programs are offered in many schools to help the many students of normal intelligence who, through some physical or emotional handicap, have fallen behind in reading ability and thus in all school work. In this type of work, particularly, the Church schools' small classes are of great help.

A gifted student, too, will benefit from the small, informal classes possible at a Church school. The bright pupil does not have to progress at the rate of the slower learners. Porter Sargent reports that private schools have a ratio of one faculty member to 9.3 students, while the national ratio in public schools is one to over 28 students. Below, girls at Annie Wright Seminary, Tacoma, Wash., sit around their teacher at a table during a class session. Page seven, boys at Pomfret school, Pomfret, Conn., appear to be considering some weighty problem. Boys at St. Peter's School, Peekskill, N. Y., are required to pass a course on Communism before graduation. The boys study Marx, Engels, the Communist Manifesto, etc., in order to understand the threat of Communism and refute its ideas intelligently.

Students of a variety of backgrounds may be found at Church schools. School administrators do not want their schools identified as "class" schools, and they welcome scholarship students to the limit of the funds available. Foreign exchange students bring contacts with life in the world outside the United States. In a survey on the subject of segregation in Church schools, made by THE LIVING CHURCH [L. C., April 3, 1955] most schools who replied reported that they were willing to take students of any origin who were scholastically qualified, although not many schools had actually had Negro students enrolled. Many religious backgrounds are represented; often Episcopal Church members are a minority of the student body, although in some schools they receive preference in admissions. Far from being members of an "elite" group, cut off from everyday American life, students at a Church school are likely to represent a greater variety of background than are those of a local school in a typical suburban community.

Athletics are an important part of the program at Church schools. Besides football, baseball, basketball and track, some schools offer horseback riding, ice hockey, rowing, skiing, and other sports. Shattuck School, Faribault, Minn., has its own golf course. A number of the boys' schools have first-class football teams. Some girls' schools also hold sports competitions between schools. Page eight, top, boys play baseball at St. Hilda's School, New York City.

A wide range of extracurricular activities is available at the schools. At St. Christopher's School, Richmond, Va., boys and director rehearse enthusiastically for the glee club in the middle picture, page eight. School papers, plays, service clubs and other activities attract students' interest in their free time.

Of the 50 or so military schools which are a part of the national R.O.T.C. program, at least 10 are Episcopal Church schools. This program gives advanced standing in college R.O.T.C. courses, and gives training helpful in military service. If the school receives an Honor rating, three of its boys may take examinations each year for West Point, and three for Annapolis. Through an organization of cadet officers, students are given training in leadership. Bottom picture, page eight, cadets participate in the daily retreat ceremony at Howe Military School, Howe, Ind.

While a few of the Church boarding schools are coeducational (St. Stephen's, Austin, Tex., Jane Iverson Hall, Laramie, Wyo., Greer School, Millbrook, N. Y.) most are for boys or girls only. Social events are scheduled, however, to provide contacts with young people of the opposite sex. At right, students at Margaret Hall School, Versailles, Ky., entertain their friends at the Junior-Senior grill party. Below, girls at St. Mary's Hall, Faribault, Minn., share a few leisure moments in their dormitory room.

Among former students at Episcopal Church schools are many people who have attained prominence in some field of endeavor. Above, left, is Miss Frances Willis, a graduate of Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis., who is U.S. Ambassador to Switzerland, the first woman career diplomat to reach the rank of ambassador. Famous names from other schools include Sun Yat Sen, who attended Iolani School, in Honolulu; Franklin D. Roosevelt, Groton School, Groton, Mass.; Lt. Gen. Thomas Dresser White, assistant chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force, St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis.; Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce and Kay Francis, actress, Cathedral School of St. Mary, Garden City, N. Y.

Students are often encouraged to take responsibility for many of the things that need doing around the school. Below, girls at St. Agnes' School, Richmond, Va., act as book store assistants. Work programs of one sort or another are found in a number of schools. Kent School, Kent, Conn., is famous for its self-help program, in which the boys do practically all the work around the school. Kent has a sliding scale of tuition fees, whereby patrons are assessed enough to meet the annual budget in accordance with their ability to pay. At some schools, older students supervise some of the activities of the younger pupils.

Church schools are found in all parts of the country, although about a third of them are located in the three dioceses of Connecticut, Long Island, and New York. Top picture, page 11, shows the buildings of Annie Wright Seminary, Tacoma, Wash., overlooking Puget Sound. Schools vary greatly in size, from small schools like the Malcolm Gordon school, Garrison, N. Y., with an enrollment of 25, to St. Paul's, Concord, N. H., with 445 students, or Choate, Wallingford, Conn., with 530. Most have enrollments between 100 and 200.

Episcopal Church schools are listed on pages 17 and 18. In THE LIVING CHURCH's annual spring Church school number [this year L. C., April 22d] information is given on size of the school, faculty, grades taught, cost, and Church connection. Another source of information is the Porter Sargent handbook Private Schools, issued annually.

While private schools are making an effort to expand are making an effort to expand their facilities, they are not expected to be able to keep up with the population increase in the next few years. For this reason, it is to be expected that enrollments will be near capacity, and entrance requirements rather strict in the coming years. Those interested in such schools for their children should begin early to consider which school best fits their situation, and make application for enrollment.

While we have primarily been considering the Church's secondary boarding schools, it should be remembered that there are Church schools of all sorts, from the theological seminaries and colleges to the parish day schools. These day schools, of which there are more than boarding schools, are growing at a rapid rate. Often they start in a small way with the lower grades, and then add one grade each year.

Below, two girls chat in their dormitory room at St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C. Through all its institutions of learning the Church provides sound education for thousands of people, while seeking first of all to make good Christians.

EDITORIALS

Why Church Schools?

THIS fall, some 17,000 boys and girls* will go off to 97 secondary boarding schools of the Episcopal Church, some to round out their formal education, others to prepare for college and perhaps for graduate study beyond that.

There are various possible motives for attending a Church school. Perhaps one's father or mother went there; or, in rarer cases still, there may be a family tradition of several generations' standing in favor of a particular school which happens to have a more or less close connection with the Episcopal Church. Perhaps it is felt that a private school—and Church schools come under this category—offers higher standards of educational aim and achievement. Parents and others responsible for the boy or girl's education may be impressed with the comparatively high ratio of teachers to students that usually obtains in such schools, especially in these days of an overcrowded public school system. Or it may be felt that there are certain intangible cultural advantages to be imbibed, more or less unconsciously, from exposure to the type of living to be found in a privately run school of the Church.

None of these motives is a wholly unworthy one, but all of them are secondary to what we believe is or should be the overarching aim of the Church school, which is to provide an education comparable to that of any other system which shall also be God-centered. Such an education, with God at the core of the curriculum, can be offered by private Church schools and in varying degrees, we believe, is offered by them.

In a Church school sacred studies, including the study of the Bible, can have an assured place among other subjects. More than that, the relevance of religion to mathematics, science, history, literature, biology, etc., can always be pointed out in the setting presupposed by the Church school. Teachers in a Church school are free to let it be known, both in class and in less formal contacts with their students, that they themselves are committed Christians. The chapel and its services remind one of the central claims of the Christian religion upon our lives.

Thus, in a Church school, religion can be the integrating influence of all that takes place anywhere on the campus—from the altar to the gymnasium. In the different Church schools, of course, there will be varying degrees of emphasis on this or that aspect of the Church's teaching. The Church schools cannot but reflect the varieties of churchmanship of the Church. But for all the different emphasis that there may be, as from school to school, religion is given in all of the Church schools a place that it cannot, in the religiously pluralistic society in which we live, be accorded in our public school system, despite all that that system does offer in educational opportunity.

*The figure 17,000 was arrived at by using the average enrollment of the 52 schools reporting enrollment in the spring 1956 Church School Number of THE LIVING CHURCH, as the average for all 96.

So, whatever the motive may be for sending a boy or a girl to a Church school, the raison d'être of the Church schools themselves is to provide a liberal education in a definitely Christian setting. And it is by their success in achieving this aim that they are to be judged.

Essay Contest

AJINGLE that this editor learned in his childhood goes after this fashion:

*"I wish I were a cassowary
On the plains of Timbaktu;
I'd eat a missionary—
Bible, Prayer Book, Hymn Book, too."*

Somewhat reminiscent of this (but in reverse) is the subject we have chosen for the 1957 LIVING CHURCH Church School Essay Contest. In other words, we are not going to ask the contestants to imagine themselves cassowaries, bent on devouring missionaries, but to imagine themselves missionaries—to write on the subject, "If I Were a Missionary—Where Would I Go and What Would I Do?"

Here is a subject, we believe, that offers wide scope for the exercise of the imagination, based upon as careful a study as the essayist may wish to make of the facts of the situation and of the world's need. It may be treated from any relevant angle. Indeed, we prefer essays that do a good job covering a particular aspect of the subject assigned to those which try to cover all aspects.

Prizes in this, the 14th contest, will be as usual: First, a gold medal and $100; second prize, a silver medal and $50; third prize, a silver medal and $25.

A bronze medal will also be made available to each school that elects to conduct an intramural contest on the subject of the essay, to be awarded to the student of the school's own selection.

The official rules and other information about the contest will be announced in the fall at about the time school begins.

Prizewinners will be announced in the spring, 1957, Church School number of THE LIVING CHURCH.

Painting of Negro Madonna Dedicated at St. Philip's

An oil painting of a Negro Madonna and Child was dedicated at St. Philip's Church, New York City, by the rector, the Rev. Shelton H. Bishop. The picture, which was painted by Mrs. Irma DeNagy, from living models, was presented to the Church by Albert Aspinall.

At the same service Miss Dolly Johnson, who became 100 years old on July 2d, was honored by Dr. Bishop, who preached his sermon on the potentialities of old age. Miss Johnson is a member of the Church of the Holy Cross in Pittsburgh.

In his sermon, Dr. Bishop described her as the "most active member of her parish." She is director of the Altar Guild. "It is part of the Church's responsibility to convince the nation that aging people have a real ministry, a spiritual potential, a wisdom, maturity, balance and a rich experience that shouldn't be wasted," he said.

Four other lay persons honored at the church service were Mrs. Laura Yergan, lieutenant commander in the U. S. Public Health Service, recently returned from two years of service in Saigon, Indo-China; Dr. and Mrs. Milton Moran Weston, both of whom hold the degree of doctor of philosophy from Columbia University; and Theodore E. Brown, assistant to George Meany, president of the A. F. of L. and of the C.I.O.

St. Philip's Church, which is located in Harlem, has 3,871 communicants, more than 90% of whom are Negroes. It is said to be the largest single Episcopal congregation in the country.

"Western Supremacy"

Indian Group Claims Christian Missionaries Force Conversions

The charge that Christian missionaries in India are engaged in bringing about conversion by "force, fraud, and other illicit means" and that missions are being used to revive "Western supremacy" in India and to disrupt the solidarity of India's non-Christian communities, has been made by a committee appointed by the Madhya Pradesh government to probe Christian missionary activities in the state.

The committee recommended that all foreign missionaries engaged primarily in proselytizing be withdrawn from the country and that properties belonging to foreign mission bodies be transferred to national churches or holding bodies, or to an international holding group. It urged also that the Indian constitution be amended to give only citizens of India the right to engage in religious propagation.

The committee was formed to study complaints by some Indian politicians and Hindu sectarian organizations that Christian missionaries had engaged in "forcible conversions and illegal proselytizing." The six-man group was set up in April, 1954, under the chairmanship of Dr. Bhawami Shanker Niyogi, former chief justice of the Nagpur high court, who has been an outspoken critic of Christian missions. The only Christian member is a college professor whom neither Protestants nor Roman Catholics have accepted as representing their interests.

"A vile propaganda against the religion of the majority is being systematically and deliberately carried on by Christian missionaries so as to create apprehension of a breach of the public peace," declared the committee. "Evangelization in India appears to be part of a uniform world policy to revive Christendom for the reestablishment of Western supremacy and is not prompted by spiritual motives."

According to the report, instances of indirect political activities by the missions have been brought to the notice of the committee. It said that "as conversion muddles the convert's sense of solidarity with his society, there is the danger of his loyalty to his country and state being undermined."

The charges were strongly repudiated by Christian authorities in India, who immediately started to gather facts and figures to disprove the accusations. Christian leaders throughout India were reported to have been deeply aroused over the allegations made in the report.

The consensus of Christian groups in India seemed to be that the committee has gone far beyond its terms of reference. They claimed that instead of being a fact-finding body, as the Madhya Pradesh government claimed, it has gone out of its way to offer comments and make recommendations.

Among the first to criticize the report was Valerian Cardinal Gracias, Archbishop of Bombay, who objected particularly to charges that foreign missionaries arriving in India have ulterior political motives. Cardinal Gracias declared that the allegation that foreign missionaries are arriving in India with political motives "has yet to be proved." He said that by and large they were in the country with the single purpose of serving India, its people and the Church. [RNS]

Archbishop Makarios Given Limited Freedom on Islands

Archbishop Makarios, British-exiled head of the Orthodox Church in Cyprus, has been given freedom of movement in the Seychelles Islands where he was taken last March, according to the Greek language newspaper, Kypros, on Cyprus. The paper said a similar concession has been granted also to the three other Church dignitaries deposed along with the Archbishop.

Kypros said Archbishop Makarios and his companions are no longer confined to the villa of San Souci, but can go anywhere on the islands provided they give advance notice of their intention. The islands are in the Indian Ocean. The paper added that Archbishop Makarios would soon be taken to London for consultations on a proposed constitution for Cyprus. [RNS]

Article Describes Needlepoint Work at Washington Cathedral

Churchpeople should find of special interest the article in the August issue of Woman's Home Companion entitled "Something of Beauty for the Lord," for it describes how the Washington Cathedral Needlepoint Committee has progressed in a universal movement to add a homely beauty to the splendor of the Church's Cathedral in the nation's capital.

Written by Margaret Thompson Biddle shortly before her recent death in Paris, the article describes the needlepoint committee that has been in existence since the spring of 1954 to provide needlepoint decoration for the Cathedral's chair cushions, backs, kneelers, rail cushions and brides' pillows.

New Jersey Clergy Support Boys In Story of Police Brutality

By GEORGE L. GRAMBS

Alleged police brutality in Jersey City, N. J., has brought into action the clergy and people of three churches, the Rev. James Dublin of the Central Baptist Church; the Rev. L. Charles Gray of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church; and the Rev. Paul Moore, Jr., the Rev. James P. Morton, and the Rev. Ledlie I. Laughlin, Jr. of Grace Episcopal Church, Van Vorst.

On June 21st, two 16-year old boys, accused of slugging a park policeman with his billy, were held at the Hudson County Parental Home in Bayonne, and the following day transferred to the county jail.

The boys, who were playing cards before 10 p.m., were ordered out of the locality by a park policeman, although one of the boys told the policeman that his mother knew where he was and that he was allowed to stay out until a later hour. The officer thereupon hit the boy, who began to walk off slowly, preceded by his companions. The boy was pushed and one of his companions snatched by the same officer.

Taken to the Lafayette Project, the officer's beat, from the Booker T. Washington Project, one of the two suffered blows from the night stick, until the officer dropped it. The boy then picked it up and began to retaliate. Other police were called, the boys put in a patrol wagon, and at the police station, according to the two boys, they were beaten with blackjacks, wet towels, sticks, hands, and feet. Other boys had been taken to the Lafayette Project before to be beaten, but they have not dared tell their parents because they were threatened by the police, it was reported.

The Jersey Journal reported only that the officer had been beaten and was silent about the officer using his night stick first. In addition the newspaper stated that the boys had past records, which Fr. Laughlin says is not true. As a result, it has been suggested that the newspaper be boycotted and the mother of one of the boys has sued it for libel. If the newspaper version of the story were true, it would permit a choice of trying the boys in either the Juvenile Court or the Criminal Court.

A number of public meetings have been held with the clergy as leaders, and a delegation of 50 people went to the City Hall to see Commissioner Joshua Ringle of the park police.

Volunteers have formed a committee to discuss the problem of discipline in the projects, and it was suggested that this incident be used as a jumping off place for getting youth centers and recreation programs planned. It was admitted that some of the parents are to blame, and the people were urged to support the groups already set up like the Tenants' Councils and the N.A.A.C.P. They do not want the officers to mistreat their children, but at the same time they do want their children to respect authority, and they want responsible authority that children can respect.

Among the complaints discussed at the meeting were the following:

- ✓ Why did the police take the boys away from their own homes?
- ✓ Why not have permanent patrolmen who would know the boys?
- ✓ By what authority is there a curfew, in absence of a law?
- ✓ Who authorizes the use of clubs and sticks?
- ✓ Why do the policemen drink during working hours?
- ✓ Why do the police drive their cars through the projects unnecessarily and endanger the lives of small children who are playing at dusk?

A request was made at City Hall that the guilty officers be suspended.

So far 400 of the 500 signatures set as a goal have been obtained on a petition which makes the following demands:

- ✓ Removal of the park police.
- ✓ The long-time appointment of a few good city police to each project.
- ✓ The setting up of the Police Athletic League. In the discussion, it was pointed out that some police have alienated the children so much by being unpleasant and discouraging them from playing peacefully on their own doorsteps that the children would never join a Police Athletic League. A suggestion was made that they get the names of policemen who did get along with the children, and enlist their help.
- ✓ The appointment of a full-time recreation worker for each project.
- ✓ A city-launched clean-up program.

Two petitioners from Grace Church were picked up on the evening of July 3d, and questioned about the petition and their right to circulate it.

Church World Service Aids Greek Earthquake Victims

The giant tidal wave had barely subsided and the earth had scarcely stopped shaking when emergency relief from American churches began to arrive for the many hundreds of injured, homeless, and destitute residents of the Greek Islands in the Aegean Sea.

Over 122,400 pounds of food and supplies, valued at $65,000 have been sent to the victims of the disastrous earthquake through the Church World Service. The supplies sent immediately upon news of the disaster included U. S. surplus cheese and other dairy products, sugar, cocoa, cottonseed oil and soap, and a carload of corn oil. Also immediately dispatched by Church World Service, acting for the major Protestant and Orthodox Churches, were 240 bales of clothing and 150 bags of shoes from stocks in its Athens warehouse.

At the request of Church World Service representatives in Athens, who rushed to the scene the day of the disaster, expenditures of $2,000 were authorized for purchase of additional relief supplies, including canned milk for babies, canned meat which could be eaten without cooking, and 500 blankets.

In addition, Schueler & Company of New York notified Church World Service that it was giving $10,000 worth of splints and plaster of paris bandages. The American Churches' relief efforts in Greece are carried out in cooperation with the Holy Synod of the Greek Orthodox Church. The emergency shipments were made possible by the Share Our Surplus program of the Churches.

United Church Men to Proclaim Faith at Cleveland Convention

Clergy and laymen from over 30 different Churches will join hands to proclaim their faith in God and dedicate themselves to Christian living at the first national convention of Christian Men. The convention is sponsored by the United Church Men, a unit of the National Council of Churches, and will be held September 14th to 16th in Cleveland.

The Rev. Billy Graham, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, Mayor Roe H. Bartle of Kansas City, and Congressman Walter Judd, are among the noted speakers who are scheduled to address the convention. The program will also include a fellowship breakfast, and discussions of the role of the layman religious life.

Orthodox Church Opposes Diplomatic Relations at Vatican

Diplomatic relations between the Vatican and Greece were opposed by the Holy Synod of the Orthodox Church in Greece, meeting in Athens.

The decision, taking an official stand against the establishment of such relations, was announced after a meeting of Foreign Minister Evangelist Averof and a number of Orthodox bishops. During the announcement a statement was read saying, "The Holy Synod has decided faithfully to continue to pursue the holy traditions of the Church and the nation, repudiating the establishment of diplomatic relations of any kind between the Greek state and the Vatican."

Reports last year said the government was looking favorably on a proposal for diplomatic relations with the Vatican. However, Vima, an Athens daily, said the government should consult with the Orthodox Church before making any decision. [RNS]

ST. PETER'S CHURCH in Northern Rhodesia was dedicated during the Provincial Synod held there.

Interracial Synod Held in Rhodesia

Nearly 500 clergy and laymen gather to worship at new St. Peter's Church

Almost 500 Negro and White Churchmen knelt together to pray for peace and harmony in a section of the world where harmony is rare and racial tensions are strong.

The place was Northern Rhodesia in Central Africa and the occasion was the second Provincial Synod. The Synod took place just one year after the Archbishop of Canterbury visited Central Africa and inaugurated a new province in Northern Rhodesia.

The African and European delegates, both clerical and lay, met together in solemn council within the Synod meetings and also during the numerous social events which accompanied the gathering. On Synod Sunday the Archbishop of Central Africa, Dr. Edward Paget, was celebrant at the sung Eucharist. In his sermon Dr. Paget likened the service to the moments on the Mount of Transfiguration. Like the three apostles, he said, "we beheld His glory, but also like them, we must descend to the plains and continue to preach Christ's Gospel in a world perplexed by fear and racial tensions."

The Synod sung Eucharist was celebrated in the new St. Peter's Mission Church, which readers of THE LIVING CHURCH helped to build by their donations in 1955. Over 230 delegates received Communion in the striking Church of contemporary design. This interracial harmony was further epitomized by the fact that the Archbishop celebrated in English, the congregation replied in Chinsenga, while the hymns were sung in three other African vernaculars.

At the beginning of the service the new church was dedicated by Bishop Green-Wilkinson of Northern Rhodesia. A debt of 1,450 pounds ($4,060) still remains on the building, but the sum is owed to friends of the mission who have advanced the money on an interest-free loan so that the contractors could be paid before the dedication took place.

Among the bishops present at the meeting was the Rt. Rev. James Hughes of Matabeleland, who left for a tour of the United States immediately after the Synod. While in the United States Bishop Hughes will visit churches, speaking on the opportunities and challenges confronting the Church in Rhodesia.

Church Council Fights Bill Proposed in North Carolina To Suspend Public Schools

North Carolina Churches are fighting the state legislature's proposed bills aimed at circumventing the U. S. Supreme Court's decision barring racial discrimination in the schools.

The Rt. Rev. Richard H. Baker, coadjutor of the diocese of North Carolina and president of the North Carolina Council of Churches, said that the council will ask the state legislature to move toward racial integration of the public school system "as fully and as soon as possible."

Bishop Baker said he also has asked the legislature to give him a hearing on the proposed bills. One of these would permit the state to pay tuition for sending children to private schools if their parents object to their attending racially-mixed classes. Another would permit a local school unit to suspend operation of schools by a majority vote if conditions "become intolerable."

Bishop Baker noted that a resolution adopted by the Church Council had stated that "any attempt to transform the public school system into any so-called private scheme of schools would inject tragic cleavages into our social structure and deprive our children of their rightful educational heritage."

The resolution conceded, he pointed out, that "we may expect to encounter difficult problems" in seeking to effectuate the Supreme Court decision. "But whether the local situation be simple or complex, we, as law-abiding citizens, should begin in good faith the implementation of the decision. Tactics of evasion are, in effect, disloyalty to the supreme law of the land," he added.

Calling on member churches to accept the challenge for positive leadership, the resolution stated, "The council is convinced that the churches have it within their power to determine, in great measure, how successfully the people of North Carolina will make their transition to an all inclusive system of public schools. Only as the gospel of Christian brotherhood becomes deeply rooted in the hearts of our people, will they be moved to build together a superior educational structure which rises above racial considerations.

Diocesan Conventions

Olympia

May 20th and 21st, Olympia, Wash.

Creation of a special committee on interracial relations was approved in a resolution adopted by convention delegates. The resolution directed a committee to be set up within the diocesan department of Christian social relations to "give guidance to our thought and action and serve as a liaison between our Church and other groups concerned with this important matter."

"The increase in racial tensions is one of the most serious problems in our country," it said, "and the easing of these tensions where they already exist — and the prevention of their occurrence where they do not — is of major concern to Christian people."

Another adopted resolution called for the formation of a committee on alcoholism to help clergymen and laymen "meet problems often confronting them from alcoholics and their families."

Quincy

May 1st and 2d, Galesburg, Ill.

Bishop Smith of Iowa was the guest speaker at the annual convention of the diocese of Quincy held at Grace Church in Galesburg. The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the diocese was held at the same time and place.

ELECTIONS. Standing Committee: clerical, J. K. Putt, C. F. Savage, G. E. Gillett; lay, C. W. Eliason, John Morgan, T. N. Morrison.

Indianapolis

May 6th and 7th, Indianapolis, Ind.

Acting on a recommendation made by Bishop Kirchhoffer, delegates to the Indianapolis convention voted to elect a coadjutor as an assistant to the bishop. A committee of eight persons was appointed by the bishop to nominate several clergymen for the position. After the list of nominees has been decided on, a special convention will be held for the election. Bishop Kirchhoffer is now 66 years old and will be eligible for retirement in two years.

In other convention business Bishop Kirchhoffer awarded citations to the Rev. F. P. Williams for his outstanding work in the leadership of the Department of Christian Education, to Mr. and Mrs. James H. Mara for their heroic efforts in the development of the diocesan property at Waycross, and to Mrs. Camilla Hiatt, bishop's secretary, for her outstanding work in that capacity.

Report Shows Religious Groups Major Recipients Of Philanthropic Giving

American religious groups receive 53 cents out of every dollar that is given for philanthropy, the nation's Department of Health, Education, and Welfare said, basing its statement on a report prepared by Dr. Thomas Karter of its division of research and statistics.

The department estimated that philanthropic giving in 1954 reached a record $5,401,000,000, of which churches and other religious agencies received $2,850,000,000.

The share of the nation's philanthropic gifts going to religious groups has shown a steady increase. In 1945, for example, of $3,229,000,000 contributed for all philanthropic purposes, only $1,158,000,000, or a little more than a third, went to religious groups.

Of the $2,850 million which religious groups received in 1954, the study estimates that $1,762 million was spent on current operating expenses, $588 million on construction of new buildings, $270 million on church-supported welfare activities, $80 million on church-supported hospitals and medical institutions, and $150 million for foreign mission work and overseas relief activities.

Archbishop Arrives in Moscow

The Rev. Arthur M. Ramsey, Archbishop of York and second ranking prelate in the Church of England, recently flew to Moscow for conferences with Russia Orthodox Church leaders, according to the New York Times.

His visit was the first by an official representative of the Church of England to the Soviet Union since the Bolshevik Revolution. Metropolitan Nikolai, second ranking Churchman, met the Archbishop at the airport.

Kansas City Rector Flies to Flagstaff to Take Charge Of Committal for Victims of Grand Canyon Plane Crash

The sun was just beginning to show over the rim of Grand Canyon, sending its filtered rays down through the miles of jagged peaks to the bottom, where a small group gathered to celebrate the Requiem Mass. It was a strange little group at Supai early that Sunday morning, while far above airline officials and rescue workers were beginning the long, hard climb down the canyon walls to the wreckage of the two planes.

The Rev. Dallis L. Harris, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Flagstaff, Ariz., had arrived at St. Andrew's Mission at Spuai, which is located at the bottom of the Grand Canyon, the night before. He had traveled to the mission to minister to the smallest Indian tribe in the world—the Havasupai Indians.

Dal Harris

That evening Fr. Harris was listening to a news broadcast on his portable radio when he heard the report that a TWA plane and a United Airline plane had collided in mid-air and crashed at the bottom of the canyon about six miles from Supai. The worst crash in airline history had occurred—128 persons had lost their lives.

Requiem Mass

To reach the scene of the crash from Supai would have meant a treacherous journey of a day and a half.

Therefore, early the next morning in St. Andrew's Chapel, with his little congregation of Indian parishioners, Fr. Harris celebrated the Requiem Mass for those who had died on the two planes.

For the next several days the newspapers carried stories of the heroic efforts of the air force and mountain climbers, some of whom were imported from Switzerland, in removing the bodies from the wreckage of the TWA plane and as many as possible from the United plane. It soon became apparent to the TWA officials that positive identification of the bodies could not be made. Later three bodies were identified and the families requested that the remains be returned to their homes for burial.

For the other 67 persons the only solution was to have a mass burial. The arrangements for conducting the service were made by the Rev. Wyburn Skidmore, a Methodist minister in charge of the Federated Church in Flagstaff. It was decided that a joint service that would include the Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish faiths would be held. Mr. Skidmore would represent the Protestants, the Rev. Anthony Vorst, priest of the Roman Catholic parish of the Nativity in Flagstaff, would represent the Catholics, and Cantor Maurice Chesler of Temple Beth Israel of Phoenix would represent the Jews.

Among the 23 passengers from Kansas City on board the plane was Mrs. Fred V. Klemp, Jr., a member of the parish of St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church. Mrs. Klemp was one of the most active communicants a parish could have. She was active in the Woman's Auxiliary. Her husband was president of the Men of St. Michael's last year and together they sponsored the Young People's Fellowship.

After determining that Mrs. Klemp and several other Episcopal Church members were aboard the plane, TWA officials in Kansas City asked that the Rev. Laurence Spencer, rector of St. Michael's, go to Flagstaff to take charge of the committal of the Church. A special flight was arranged to take Fr. Spencer and members of the families of the deceased to Flagstaff. After the joint service was over and the members of the families had left, Fr. Spencer and Fr. Harris had the committal of the Church.

And so between the Requiem Mass at the bottom of the Canyon and the final committal at the common grave there were many dramatic events that made the headlines. But one of the most important facts was that the historic Mother Church in her quiet way, first and last commended the souls of the departed to the mercy of God.

Arab Finds Another Scroll While Looking for Sheep

An Arab shepherd wandering the hills of Palestine, looking for lost sheep, found—not his sheep—but one more of the long lost Dead Sea scrolls.

The new Biblical scroll was found about a mile from the caves where the first of the Dead Sea scrolls were found in 1947 in the Jordan-administered section of Palestine. It is said to contain the five books of the Pentateuch—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy.

KEMPER HALL

—86 Years of Christian Witness

Kemper Hall achieves "preparatory" training in every sense — each girl is prepared during the most formative years for her important woman's role in home, parish and community. Examples of the doing which builds a whole personality:

- Time is allowed during the school day for girls to learn altar guild work by actually preparing sacred vessels, laundering and making altar linens, arranging flowers and vestments for chapel services.
- The school choir and soloists appear in concert with the Kenosha Symphony Orchestra.
- Students forego a Christmas party for themselves to play hostesses to youngsters from the Orthopedic School.
- Students last year earned $875 for mission giving and voted to dispense it to 18 worthy causes ranging from Atlantic Coast flood relief to a college in India.
- Academic studies are augmented by frequent field trips to Wisconsin's forests and lakes and to cultural centers in Chicago and Milwaukee.

Increasingly important in this restless age is Kemper Hall's 86-year history of solid tradition in which every graduate shares and to which every girl is challenged to contribute.

Exchange of Visits

I am much distressed by reports that the Soviet delegation of church visitors has been wined and dined in Seabury House, the sanctum sanctorum of the Episcopal Church in the United States, and that we have thus lent our support to the growing belief that the Communist regime in Russia can now be trusted to trust us. I think this mutual exchange of visits among Christian leaders a great mistake. On the surface it looks as if we are reasserting our belief that we are really brothers, but a closer look at the facts is not so reassuring.

Who ordered the visit and sponsored it in Russia? The Communist party, of course — which is explicitly dedicated to the destruction of all we hold dear. Therefore, they could only release for such a visit those who will foster this basic purpose of Communism. When our clergy visited Russia they were surprised (so the reports said) to be under klieg lights wherever they went and they wondered why. Couldn't they understand that this exchange of visits is the last act in the effort to break the opposition of our real friends and brothers who are enduring persecution in the slave labor camps? Just who are our friends, anyway? I shrink from implying that our godly bishops are fuzzy-headed on the matter of Christian loyalties, but this is nevertheless what I'm doing and I'm sorry.

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "I have not been attending the Episcopal Church very long, and therefore am not well versed in Church beliefs or dogma, and was indeed perplexed when I read your column concerning the desirability of the ascetic life.

"This was one of the things on which I had always felt that the Catholic Church was off base, so you can understand my confusion. Now I wish to impose on your time and good nature to ask you to explain to me why my thinking is fallacious.

"It seems to me that, carried to the ultimate conclusion, what you are claiming to be most pleasing to God would be the dying out of the race of man—indeed, that it would have been better for the race never to have developed. Apparently God was operating on the cynical assumption that very few people would choose what was most pleasing to Him.

"The only belief in this regard which makes sense to me is that each person is living the life most pleasing to God when he decides, with God's help, the way he can live the fullest Christian life, whether it be in or out of the marriage relation."

THE LETTER-WRITER hits the nail on the head in that last paragraph. The point I was trying to make in a series of columns stretching over some weeks is that ascetic theology does not set up rules of right vs. wrong behavior, but is a wide and free area in which the individual decides for himself what special gift he will give to

God. A person who considered marriage a difficult but glorious thing as opposed to safe and sane bachelorhood (or spinsterhood) would be doing the heroic thing in choosing marriage.

THE ASCETIC rigors of the college football player, undergone (at the risk of shortening life) for the sake of mastery of the art of advancing a pigskin ball, are incomprehensible, impractical, and ridiculous, unless the college spirit happens to make sense to you. Similarly, the renunciations of the Christian athlete are equally incomprehensible, impractical, and ridiculous, unless the goal beyond the goal, in terms of total Christian dedication to God, makes sense to you.

NOT ALL of us are called to play on the college team, nor to be members of religious orders. But let us give to the latter, as we do to the former, credit for doing something strenuous for Christ; and try, in our particular vocations, to match their ardor, or even exceed it if we can. PETER DAY

REPORT FROM THE SEMINARIES ON PARISH OFFERINGS, 1956

The Church's support for the program of theological education through parish offerings on behalf of the seminaries continues to grow.

So far in 1956, over 4,500 parish treasurers have sent checks to one or another of the schools that prepare men for the sacred ministry; these offerings to date amount to $433,933.98.

For parishes that have made no contribution to this cause this year, any Seminary will gladly furnish literature and special offering envelopes.

But the fact remains that I fail to see in such reading of Early Church history as I have done that the Apostles' entertained at banquets from time to time delegations from Nero's court in the hope that they might release "the tensions of the times."

(REV.) ROBERT E. MERRY
Rector, Church of the Nativity
Pittsburgh, Pa.

► We agree with Fr. Merry that there is a danger of drawing unsound conclusions about the Communist regime in Russia from the exchange of visits between Russian and American Christian leaders. But we do not agree with his implication that we are not brothers of Russian Christians; nor that the Communist party sponsors the Russian Church; nor that the visitors were comparable to a "delegation from Nero's court."

There is no doubt that these visits reinforced the current policy of Russian Communism to attempt to show a less totalitarian face to the world, and that they probably would not have been allowed to take place if that policy had not been adopted. That is why they contain elements of political danger. Nevertheless, the Christian Church has a life of its own and objectives of its own — both in the USSR and in the United States. And the real purpose of the exchange of visits was to express this Christian life and accomplish these Christian objectives.

If Fr. Merry would like a Neronian parallel, the Scriptures provide one: "All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Caesar's household" (Philippians 4:22). The Caesar in question was almost certainly Nero.

Wrong Impression

I have only just seen the two reviews of my book, Homosexuality and the Western Christian Tradition, which appeared in THE LIVING CHURCH on December 2, 1955, (by Dr. E. R. Hardy) and on April 15, 1956, (by the Rev. Carroll E. Simcox). Since their effect is calculated to give an entirely wrong impression of the book, of my own views, and (by implication) of the position of the Church of England Moral Welfare Council, I must ask you kindly to allow me the privilege of a reply.

First, may I thank Dr. Hardy for pointing out the uncorrected slip on p. 84; of course, De renuntiatione saeculi is only pseudo-Basilian — though that, in my estimation, does not in this instance greatly diminish its significance.

Dr. Simcox criticizes me for omitting to answer the question: "Should Christians tolerate homosexual behaviour?" and implies that as "a Christian theologian" I failed in my "obligation to try to set our thinking in a Christian perspective." But my introduction makes it quite clear that I wrote as a historian, not as a theologian — and that I deliberately excluded any discussion of theological and moral matters. It is indeed hard when an author is censured for not doing what he expressly disclaimed any intention of doing! Doubtless Dr. Simcox would rejoin that I ought not so to have limited myself; but I think that both he and Dr. Hardy have overlooked the purpose of the book, and its relation to the British situation and to my other writings on the subject. May I therefore stress the following points?

1. Homosexuality and the Western Christian Tradition (as the introduction explains) was expressly designed to cover historical and exegetical matters not handled in an interim report, The Problem of Homosexuality (produced for the Church of England Moral Welfare Council by the Church Information Board, London, 1954). This report dealt with the moral and Christian aspects of homosexuality; my book not only supplements it, but naturally accepts and endorses its general conclusions.

2. My book had a second purpose, explained on the dust jacket (it could not be stated in the text). It was also prepared as personal evidence for the Departmental Committee on Homosexual Offences and Prostitution. Since this committee is concerned solely with the law and its administration, discussion of topics (such as the morality of homosexual practices) which lay outside its terms of reference would have been both irrelevant and impertinent. I restricted myself, therefore, to an investigation of the historical factors (including the sources and content of Church teaching) which appear to have contributed to the determination of our legal and social attitudes.

3. That I have not neglected moral questions, and that I handle them on lines of which your reviewers could hardly disapprove, will be evident from perusal of an essay, "The Homosexual and Christian Morals," which I furnished for a symposium, They Stand Apart (Heinemann, London, October, 1955). Therein I develop arguments similar to those of Dr. Hardy and Dr. Simcox, and reach similar conclusions.

4. The most recent and comprehensive statement of my position will be found in Sexual Offenders and Social Punishment (Church Information Board, London, May, 1956). This contains the official evidence which I drafted for the Moral Welfare Council for submission to the departmental committee; and among other matter are the greater part of the above mentioned essay, some suggestions for the pastoral handling of the invert and his problems, and an introduction which is important because in it I explain the principles which have governed both my own and the Council's approach to the whole question.

5. For practical reasons these different writings of mine were produced and published separately, but they constitute in the aggregate a single approach to the subject of homosexuality, and must be read together; a comprehensive volume was out of the question.

I fully appreciate that a reviewer must form and express his judgment upon the book which he has before him — though in view of its publication date I am surprised that both Dr. Hardy and Dr. Simcox were not asked to take into account the essay in They Stand Apart. But an author is at least entitled to join issue with his reviewer over misrepresentations of the particular work reviewed; and there are two such which I wish to select from Dr. Hardy's notice.

He writes of my "constant insinuation, never quite definite, that the Church has . . . erred in this matter, and should extend a greater tolerance to 'two persons of the same sex who affirm that they are in love'." Now this is a gratuitous twisting of the sense such as one does not expect from the scrupulous reviewer. Nowhere do I say that the Church "should extend a greater tolerance. . . ." If the reader turns to p. 157, he will see that Dr. Hardy has quite misunderstood the import of a rhetorical question designed merely to challenge thought. Any doubt upon this point, however, should disappear if pp. 74-77 of Sexual Offenders and Social Punishment are consulted.

Again, Dr. Hardy says that I suggest that St. Paul "would have expressed himself differently with the benefit of modern knowledge" — implying, apparently, that I think the Apostle would have mitigated his strictures upon the vices of antiquity had he known the technical distinction between inversion and perversion. I have checked all the references — and again, I nowhere find any such assertion. I merely observe in several places that the condemnations of the New Testament are obviously directed against those who deliberately and persistently cultivate vicious homosexual practices; but that there is no express biblical guidance of how to deal, for example, with the case of the genuine invert who, after a lifetime of control, 'falls' in a moment of personal stress — a problem which engages the pastor perhaps more than others in the realm of homosexuality.

The candid reader may well feel that the insinuations are the reviewers' rather than the author's. Dr. Hardy and Dr. Simcox seem to have read into a studiously objective and dispassionate presentation of historical and biblical evidence certain implications which were assuredly not in my mind, which formed no part of my purpose in writing, and which can only be extorted from the text by what I can but term, with reluctance, something of a disingenuous approach. Such unwarranted imputations are bound to have a damaging effect, particularly upon those many who will take their opinion of me and my views from the reviews, and not from my writings.

If your reviewers and readers will have the goodness to consult the works which I have mentioned, I think they will find, on a general view of my position, none of the "deceitful sophistries of the Zeitgeist," and no mitigation of the Christian condemnation of homosexual practices as sinful in all cases. But they will, I hope, find an honest and charitable attempt to come to grips with a pressing moral and social problem as we see it in Britain; an endeavor to deal with it constructively; and, I trust, a genuinely Christian sympathy with the predicament of the invert as a seriously handicapped person.

It is still not too late for THE LIVING CHURCH to withdraw the charges of "soft-headedness" and "wrongheadedness" to which it has unfortunately given currency; and to see that its readers are accurately informed, not only of my personal views on the question of homosexuality, but of the attitude of the Church of England Moral Welfare Council — since the latter cannot but be associated to some extent with that of one of its officers.

Such Golde and Sillver

THE SHRINE OF OUR LADY OF WAL-SINGHAM. By J. C. Dickinson. New York: Cambridge University Press. Pp. xiii, 150. $3.50.

About 1130 one Richelde of Ferrauges built a chapel dedicated to our Lady, at Walsingham, which is located in the northern part of Norfolk, England, near the North Sea. The chapel was no ordinary one but was planned as a reproduction of the house in Nazareth where St. Mary was greeted by the Archangel Gabriel. Probably the idea was suggested to Richelde by the visit of her son, Geoffrey, to the Holy Land some years earlier.

The original chapel contained an image of our Lady with the Holy Child, showing her seated on a throne with the infant Child in her arms, though the image is undoubtedly of a somewhat later date.

The early chapel was regarded with so much veneration, that when a larger building was required, it was built around the original chapel. About this time St. Bernard was stirring up popular devotion to the Holy Land by his preaching of the Second Crusade. This fact probably lies behind the rapid rise to fame of the chapel and the image it contained — the Shrine of our Lady of Walsingham. Henry III visited the Shrine a number of times and made numerous grants to it. He also implanted a deep devotion to the Shrine in his son, Edward I. Every succeeding English monarch, as well as many foreign notables, made pilgrimages to the Shrine. Even Henry VIII in his early youth, paid Walsingham a number of visits.

The restricted nature of the records affords little evidence of visits of less illustrious persons. However, we do know that from the 14th century on, a steady stream of pilgrims, both royalty and lesser persons, is found wending its way to the Shrine. The clear sign of the popularity is the great wealth the Shrine had acquired by the time of its destruction in 1538. On July 14th of that year, the Prior reports to [Thomas] Cromwell that the Royal Commissioners had taken the image of our Lady from the chapel, "aliso such golde and sillver as were theare." By September, the image had been destroyed and the Shrine was no more.

In 1922 a replica of the ancient image of our Lady was installed in the Anglican Parish Church at Walsingham, and organized pilgrimages have been made ever since. A very attractive booklet describing the revival of the devotion, has been published by those in charge. It contains many excellent illustrations.

Somewhat different in character, however, is J. C. Dickinson's interesting study, The Shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham. Dickinson traces the history of the Shrine from its origin to its destruction, with an account of the many famous pilgrims who visited it. The second half of the book is an adequate account of the ruins and of the archeological investigations which have been made in recent years. The book concludes with a bibliography and a number of illustrations of the ruins and the pilgrims badges connected with the Shrine.

All those interested in the Middle Ages, and particularly the history of the Church, will find this a delightful study of one of the lesser known features of medieval life.

HOWARD T. FOULKES

THE BRIDGE. A Yearbook of Judaeo-Christian Studies. Volume I. Edited by John M. Oesterreicher. Pantheon Books. Pp. 349. $3.95.

The Bridge is a Roman Catholic publication, appearing under the imprimatur of the Archbishop of Newark. As the title implies, it is the first of a projected series of yearly publications, and, as would be guessed, it is a symposium, to which various Roman Catholic scholars have contributed.

The book is an attempt to approach the Jews, not on the level of scorn and contempt, but on the level of love. At the same time it is aimed at Christians, for it is impossible for a Christian to offer love to a Jew unless he first understands the Jewish factors in his own heritage, and likewise understands the Jewish point of view.

The Living Church

It is a pleasure to see an attempt of this sort made, even at long last.

The range of the articles is very wide. Many are biblical, but many cover contemporary problems. There is an informative review of the Finaly case, an appreciation of the thought of Simone Weil, and a statistical report on the fate of European Jewry during the Hitler epoch.

Many articles are aimed at points which have been controversial issues in Jewish-Christian relations. Raissa Maritain's "Abraham and the Ascent of Conscience," for example, deals with the problems occasioned by apparently immoral behavior on the part of the biblical patriarchs. Fr. Richard Kugelman's "Hebrew, Israelite, Jew, in the New Testament" attempts to show in what sense the Church can be said to be the true Israel. Dom Hilaire Duesberg writes, in "The Trial of the Messiah," on that perennial battle-cry, "the Jews crucified Christ," and demonstrates that Jesus was crucified, not by a people, but by a spirit which can be found within any people.

The Book Review section contains a favorable review of Dom Gregory Dix's posthumously published Jew and Greek, which will be of interest to Anglicans.

It is not possible to review these articles in detail. They are all responsible, and essentially sound. Many of them tend to be wordy, but they sustain interest all the same. They are not marked by any more specific Roman bias than one would expect, although one might criticize the Abbot of Downside's "According to Matthew" in this regard: the Jewishness of the Gospels, with the Exodus symbolism contained therein, is not dependent upon a recognition of the priority of Matthew.

The limitation of this Yearbook is that it will appeal only to the intellectual. Could not some of this material be adapted for popular tracts?

The reviewer will await the publication of Volume II with interest.

In Brief

THE FORM OF SOLEMNIZATION OF MATRIMONY as in the book of Common Prayer—with Certificate. Seabury Press. About 15 pages. Leatherette, $1; fabricoid, $1.75; white leather, $4.

Contains marriage service, with certificate, propers for Nuptial Eucharist, and spaces for signatures of guests. A handsome souvenir for the bride and groom.

THE MAR THOMA SYRIAN LITURGY. A translation into English by George Kuttickal Chacko. Morehouse-Gorham. Pp. 19. Paper, $1.

The Mar Thoma Syrian Church of Malabar is the only Orthodox Church with a Reformed tradition. This translation of its Liturgy will be of interest to Anglicans and others. It combines Eastern wordiness

(cf. "In the heights at the right hand of God the Father, where dwelleth the Messiah, must be our thoughts, our hearts and our very being at this time" for "Lift up your hearts") with an absence of such Eastern features as the Little Entrance and Great Entrance and with the Western position of the Creed.

The booklet contains a number of typographical errors and is overpriced.

"THE Lindisfarne Gospels," one of the greatest treasures of the British Museum, will be published in the United States in a facsimile edition in September by Philip Duschnes, rare book dealer of New York, in two volumes at $375 ($325 before publication). Executed about 700 A.D., this illuminated Latin manuscript of the Gospels will be printed in exact facsimile by Urs Graf-Verlag of Switzerland, which produced a similar facsimile of the "Book of Kells" in 1950. It will be limited to 680 copies.

The publication of this manuscript is considered one of the most important events in scholarly and religious publishing in recent years.
